

Amazingly Vital 'Katie' Tipping Belle of Marine Birthday Ball

Silver-Haired Woman, 60, Mother of Staff Sergeant.

By ELISABET M. STONE.

The belle of the Marine birthday ball at the Ansley hotel Tuesday night was not the lovely chosen as Marine Queen. The real belle of that ball was a silver-haired woman of 60, mother of one of the stalwart sergeants, Mrs. Katherine Dolan Tipping.

Katherine Tipping, known to all who love her as "Katie," has been in Atlanta visiting her son. She was en route to Rochester, N. Y., on a vacation from her duties as assistant superintendent of Touro Infirmary in New Orleans, La., one of the finest hospitals in the south.

She stopped off just for one night, but was prevailed upon by her son, Staff Sergeant Dolan Tipping, to stay over for the ball. She agreed and stopped the show cold, outdanced the young girls and, when the dance was over, was still as fresh as when it began.

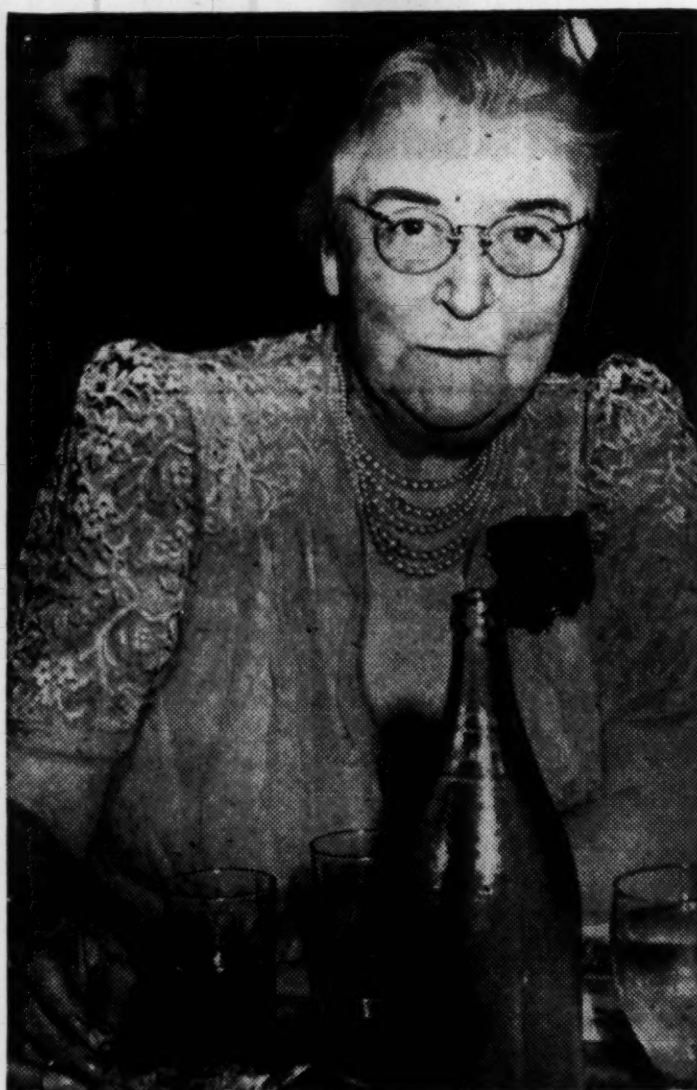

Amazingly Vital. "Katie" Tipping has had a very full and interesting life. She is one of the few women in America who is a Dame of the British Empire and she received the decoration for "distinguished service to the Empire" during the first World War. She wears the cross proudly, pinned just over her heart. It reads, "For Service to God and Empire." The reason she is not serving actively in this war is because some people seem to think she is "just a trifle too advanced in age."

Mrs. Tipping came to America from Ireland when a young girl and chose nursing for a profession. In 1908 she was graduated from training in Philadelphia and moved to New Orleans to enter the then new Touro Infirmary. She moved up rapidly, then Arthur Tipping came to the hospital as superintendent. He took one look at the rosy-cheeked, red-haired Katherine Dolan and Touro lost a nurse.

Two sons were born to the couple, then, in 1922, she was left a widow. She went back to the hospital at once, finding in work and service, solace for her loss.

Unfailing Good Humor. To most people who have ever been patients in Touro, the hospital means "Katie" Tipping. She is the pulse and the radiance of the place and no one leaves it without carrying a vivid memory of her wit and kindness, her unfailing good humor and unforgettable personality. But it is from the resident nurses and doctors and internes you get the best story about her.

They love her and fall over themselves to shout her praises. No scared little novice has ever

PLENTY OF PEP—Mrs. Katherine Dolan Tipping, better known as "Katie" Tipping, was the belle of the Marine ball Tuesday night, tripping the light fantastic like a young girl and having a fine "holiday." She is 60, and the mother of Staff Sergeant Dolan Tipping, stationed in Atlanta.

come to Touro without finding herself tucked under "Katie's" friendly wing and being made to feel at home, a part and parcel of the hospital.

"When 'Katie' Tipping works she goes at it like a whirlwind and there is no stopping until the job is done. She plays the same way, as all who met her during her brief stay here will attest and, as all who saw her at the party will swear!

No one had a better time, if, indeed, anyone had as good a one. She was out on the dance floor as soon as the music started, she sang the Marine hymn with as much vigor and verve as anyone who lifted their voices to the lines of "From the Halls of Montezuma to the Shores of Tripoli," and, when the party broke up, she was in the last elevator going down. She was on "holiday" as she, with her tang of brogue, expresses it . . . and she was having the time of her young life.

Vast Housing Project

Okayed for Brunswick The Federal Public Housing Authority yesterday approved a $538,981 housing project for Brunswick, Ga., to accommodate shipyard workers.

The project calls for construction of 1,000 dormitory accommodations with work to start today and be completed within 60 days. The Mion Construction Company, of Atlanta, was awarded the contract on a cost plus fixed basis, the fee amounting to $18,000.

Atlanta Short In Quota For Typewriters

OPA Urges Business Men To Attend Meeting Tonight.

Pointing out that Atlanta has turned in less than 25 percent of the assigned quota of typewriters in the nation-wide drive to obtain urgently needed machines to equip the armed forces, W. T. Christy, deputy director of the regional War Production Board urged businessmen of the city to attend a meeting of the National Office Management Association at the Ansley hotel at 7:15 o'clock tonight when the critical typewriter situation will be discussed.

Major William Newkirk, liaison officer for the War Production Board, will outline the need of typewriters to equip the rapidly expanding Army and Navy, and George Spurlin, of the National Office Management Association's Atlanta chapter, will suggest office efficiency methods which will enable civilians to use three typewriters in place of four.

It is estimated a minimum of 600,000 machines now in use, or one out of every four standard typewriters manufactured since 1935, must go to the war front. Atlanta's quota is 4,000.

Georgia Leads Nation in Pecans

Associated Press Regional Service. WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(AP)—An unusually light pecan production of 80,848,000 pounds is forecast for 1942.

The Agriculture Department's estimate yesterday contrasted this with the 121,488,000 pounds of last year.

Production of improved varieties is expected to be 47,574,000 pounds, against 51,017,000 pounds in 1941. The wild, or seedling crop is expected to be 33,174,000 pounds. It was 70,481,000 pounds last year.

Production in Oklahoma and Texas will be unusually light because of severe insect and disease damage. In Georgia, production was the largest on record.

Georgia moved from second place last year (26,220,000 pounds) to first place this year with an estimated yield of 28,006,000 pounds for all varieties.

Available Jobs Benefits Listed

A total of $36,547,534.98 was available as benefits to unemployed in Georgia as of September 30, Ben T. Huie, commissioner of labor, announced yesterday. Huie also said that the trust fund earned $201,599 in interest for the third quarter to push the total interest earned so far this year to almost $800,000.

The United States Treasury, in which the fund is on deposit, added $166,751 for the first quarter and $209,410 for the second. Since creation of the fund, interest payments have aggregated $2,520,640. The fund is maintained by contributions paid by employers subject to the state law establishing job insurance.

Smithgall Named WAGA Manager

Charles A. Smithgall Jr., yesterday was named general manager of radio station WAGA, replacing Don Islet, according to an announcement by George B. Storer, president of the Fort Industry Company, owners of the station. Smithgall, who has been a prominent figure in local broadcasting for the past 10 years, has been conducting WAGA's "morning watch" program. He recently was elected vice president of the Georgia Association of Broadcasters.

Islet has been called to the Fort Company's home office in Toledo, Ohio.

Statement Is Issued

In Credit Rule Case CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 11. (AP)—Otis Clark, general manager of six furniture stores here, one in Dalton, Ga., and one in LaFayette, Ga., said in a statement that the firms had not followed federal credit regulations because "we felt all our customers were not able" to meet prescribed terms.

The stores' operating licenses were suspended for a week by the Federal Reserve Board yesterday for alleged failure to comply with federal consumer credit regulations. "We were guilty of not requiring the large down payment and the large weekly payment (on installment purchases)," Clark's statement said. "For 18 years we . . . have always extended long terms . . . We will be closed during the week from November 22 to 28 as directed."

RAF Wings Presented To William D. Grant

The third American to complete training with the RAF class at the base, Grant was presented his wings and commission. The other Americans were graduated in previous classes.

Fish Story Proves To Be Real Thing

A court reporter who knows something about the rules of evidence had proved yesterday to the satisfaction of his judge, the solicitor general and more than 30 friends, that he really caught 321 trout on a fishing trip.

E. J. Witt, reporter for Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy's court, came back from the vicinity of Port St. Joe, Fla., the other day with the tale of his big catch. Other courthouse fishermen and friends smiled with that "tell us another" air.

Witt then invited both friends and rivals to a fish fry at his home at 1056 Boulevard, where they ate fish, hush puppies and the trimmings till they could eat no more. Guests of honor were Judge Pomeroy and Solicitor General Boykin.

Linder Attacks AAA in Farm Bureau Speech

Wingate Tells Macon Audience Agencies Should 'Clean House'

MACON, Ga., Nov. 11.—(AP)—Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder yesterday urged abolition of the AAA, and H. L. Wingate, president of the Georgia Farm Bureau Federation, declared the Triple-A and the Farm Security Administration would be wiped out unless they clean house.

Both attacks on the agencies were delivered at the annual convention of the Georgia Farm Bureau here. About 500 farmers are attending the two-day convention.

The agriculture commissioner asked farmers to "get out from under the control of the AAA." He said it is no longer necessary to control crops during this war emergency. And added that most of the money allocated to the agricultural agencies are spent in overhead expenses and do not reach the farmers.

Linder said a subsidiary of the J. P. Morgan Company controls a large share of the rayon business. The duPont Company controls the other part of the rayon business.

Seven of the nine committee members in Washington that voted to use rayon instead of cotton on ties were representatives of Morgan and duPont interests, he asserted.

An appeal to the farmers to clean up the Triple-A to keep it from being abolished was voiced by Wingate.

"Voting out the Triple-A next month will not solve the farm problem," Wingate said. "If you kill the Triple-A program you have lost every price guarantee on the statute books. These guarantees are worth enough for the farmers to organize and demand that the government clean house and give the farmers a farmers' program."

"We farmers should organize every county so the counties may operate a farm program, instead of a centralized program being operated out of Washington. We should not cut our own throats by killing the AAA. We should clean it up."

Tremendous reduction in administration costs of the Farm Security Administration was asked by Wingate.

"Under the present administrative cost of 38 per cent, it is costing roughly one dollar to carry two dollars to the farmer," the Farm Bureau president pointed out. "It cost the government $267,000,000 to administer an FSA fund of $741,000,000. We cannot continue to do business like this. There are some very good features of the FSA, particularly the tenant purchase program, but the administrative cost should be cut to 10 per cent."

Wingate also asked that the supervision of the tenant purchase client be loosened, so the farmer could "get back on his own feet."

He lashed as a "Russian plan" the system of the government owning farms.

The audience cheered when Wingate said that the one sure way to farm rehabilitation was to give the farmer a fair price for his products. He declared American farmers cannot produce the food and fiber necessary to win the war under their present reduced amount of equipment, materials and labor.

Linder To Speak At Albany Meeting

ALBANY, Ga., Nov. 11.—Tom Linder, commissioner of agriculture, will attend a farmers' mass meeting in Albany on Friday, November 13, at 8 o'clock. Linder is scheduled to make the principal talk at this meeting and a large crowd of farmers and others who are interested in the welfare of the farmers are expected to attend from Dougherty and adjoining counties.

The meeting is scheduled to be held in the courthouse where a large crowd can be seated.

Dr. C. R. Hodges, of Albany, chairman of the Farm Bureau program committee, arranged with Linder to come down for this occasion and talk to the farmers on any subject he wishes to choose.

This meeting is being sponsored by the Dougherty County Farm Bureau.

All North Africa Yields to U. S.

occupied zone diminished in direct ratio to the general advance of the German divisions to "all objectives" in France.

Pétain Communique.
With high German officers all around him, Pétain and his cabinet issued a communique which said the marshal was "counting on" the French army in Africa "to continue the struggle to the limit of its forces." With Pétain was Pierre Laval, just back from conference with Hitler in Munich.

The "cease-fire" order from Admiral Darlan, however, was clear recognition that after 77 hours, the American-Vichy "war" across more than 1,000 miles of Atlantic and Mediterranean coast was at an end. United States troops, by then, had possession of every important center of resistance.

Darlan's Order.
Darlan, who as commander-in-chief of all Vichy armed forces fell into American hands in Algeria, ordered all resistance to cease after conducting secret negotiations with U. S. Major General Mark W. Clark.

In the early hours of this dramatic day Adolf Hitler had turned the clock back to June, 1940, destroying his armistice with France on the grounds it was immediately threatened by Allied invasion from the North African coast.

His divisions were moving rapidly through the so-called unoccupied zone of France to the great port of Marseille and the naval station of Toulon, by way of the Rhone valley and the Midi.

They also were spreading out along the Pyrenees border between France and Spain.

The Germans announced their troops had reached all their objectives, presumably including the Mediterranean ports, within 12 hours after crossing the demarcation line.

Italian troops, doing Hitler's bidding, advanced eastward along the French Riviera to Nice, and others were reported to have landed at Bastia, on the northeast coast of Corsica.

This island home of Napoleon, 100 miles from Nice, is being taken under Axis "protection," Hitler announced. He claimed the American-British force in Africa planned to occupy Corsica first, then proceed to southern France.

A French war fleet of three battleships, seven cruisers, a seaplane carrier, 25 destroyers and other units evidently still lay off Toulon. Its fate was in doubt.

Across the Mediterranean barrier the American Armies under Lieutenant General Dwight D. Eisenhower raced eastward along the Algerian coast, occupying Bougie, 110 miles east of Algiers, on the way to Tunisia.

Situation at Tunis.
Italian Marines were said in Allied quarters to have entered Bizerte, Tunisia's key port. Berlin claimed that United States forces had been attacking Tunis, the capital, for a day, but this was not borne out.

French resistance to the American forces in Morocco and Algeria ceased with the capitulation of Casablanca, first city of Morocco, which was attacked by land and sea since Sunday.

Rabat, above Casablanca, was firmly occupied; Algiers and Oran, main cities of Algeria, already were in United States hands.

Thus more than 1,000 miles of Atlantic and Mediterranean coast, all of French North Africa save for the developing battleground of Tunisia, was in the possession and service of the Allied forces for the coming showdown with the German and Italian enemy.

But the Darlan order to end French resistance applied to Tunisia as well as to the rest of France's North African empire.

Pétain Is Bewildered.
Before dawn Hitler informed bewildered old Marshal Pétain and "the French people" that he had learned "since 24 hours" that the next Allied attack would be against Corsica and the French Riviera coast; that therefore, German and Italian troops would occupy the Mediterranean shoreline "on the quickest way through France" and also "take part in the protection of Corsica."

Agast, Pétain then replied: "I protest solemnly," accused Hitler of "suppressing the first assumptions and principles of the armistice" and, it was reported, added that he would in no way interfere with any resistance which the French might offer to the advancing German and Italian troops.

On this 24th anniversary of another armistice, however, the French, disarmed and hungry, had no hope of offering any real obstacle to the extension of enemy occupation.

Whether or not the French navy off Toulon would be able to get its warships away was, also, problematical.

Shadow Capital.
Pétain and Pierre Laval were still at Vichy, their shadow capital; German officers and their staffs were reported to have entered the very hotel occupied by the "government" and Vichy, as a regime, was utterly at an end.

Hitler, in his message, offered the sop to Pétain of a "government seat" at Versailles. There was no indication that Pétain or even Laval would accept; indeed, Laval, the quondam "chief of government," was reported in some quarters to have refused a military alliance between Germany and France prior to Hitler's decision to occupy all of the country. Laval saw Hitler at Munich early this week.

In this historic hour for France, Prime Minister Winston Churchill promised the French an eventual Allied assault across the channel or the North sea and implied this would come swiftly "should the enemy become demoralized at any moment."

He called on all Frenchmen to think "only of the liberation of their native land."

Fighting French.
General Charles de Gaulle, the Fighting French chieftain, called on French fighting men to join the Allies with their guns, ships and planes.

London believed that Hitler's move would tie down at least 15 of the 30 divisions which he is reputed to have had in France.

Moreover it was reported that the Axis is feverishly fortifying Sardinia, between Corsica and Tunisia.

On the Italian mainland, civilians were evacuated from the Ligurian seacoast between Genoa and La Spezia, northeast of Corsica.

Meanwhile American forces plunged eastward across Algeria to strike the Axis in Tunisia and beyond in Libya after their brilliantly executed, 77-hour campaign.

While Eisenhower's men consolidated victories at Algiers, Oran and Casablanca, highly mobile American units shot into the Algerian interior and along the coast 120 miles to Bougie, spoiling for their first big clash with the Germans in this war.

Their most immediate prospect of a clash was with air-borne troops plumped into Tunisia by the Germans.

Making tracks across the inland desert sands, other American units were pushing toward Libya in an apparent nutcracker drive forged in concert with the British to trap and smash Marshal Rommel's all but knocked out Africa Corps.

Reports that Italian marines as well as Nazi air troops and combat planes were in Tunisia indicated the Axis intended to combat the Allied advance there instead of waiting for them to get to Libya.

Tunisian Stake.
The biggest Tunisian stake in the Allied-Axis race against time is Bizerte, the biggest and best-equipped French naval base in the Mediterranean.

The northernmost town of Africa, Bizerte is 38 miles north of Tunis, capital of the French protectorate, it would provide an excellent jumping off place for an Allied invasion thrust against Sardinia, Sicily or the Italian mainland, or all three. It has a magnificent land-locked harbor and is at the mouth of a great lagoon.

In addition to sending marines into Tunisia, the Italians were reported to have landed troops at Bastia, on the French island of Corsica.

Long coveted by Mussolini, Corsica would be an excellent stepping stone for the Allies in any move against the southern European coast.

The dramatic denouement of French forces pointed to early establishment of a refugee French government in North Africa and organization of French colonial troops at the side of the Allies under General Henri Honoré Giraud.

Darlan's precise role in the developments, however, still was obscure except for one thing—he no longer could be numbered among the men of Vichy.

Pétain's Appeal.
The German foreign office diplomatic information bureau from Berlin announced that Pétain's protest had been received by the Germans. It termed the protest "an appeal" and added, however, the French government ordered troops and police under its command not to make any resistance to the advance of the German troops and to observe calm.

Vichy circles said that in expectation of the German entrance into the unoccupied zone, prefects of all departments, acting under Pétain's orders, had during the past 48 hours burned official papers that might reveal their attitude.

Excellent relations have been established between the French civilian population in North Africa and the Americans, according to Wes Gallagher.

Even the French soldiers at Algiers and Oran have drawn praise from Major General Lloyd Fredendall for their attitude.

At Oran, American pilots reported that French workers showed up at the airfields the day after the American occupation, ready and willing to work as though nothing had happened.

Big Days Ahead Predicted for Furniture Men

Industry Will Weather Storm, Rau Tells Association's Final Session.

Predicting "unprecedented big days ahead," speakers at the closing sessions of the two-day Southern War Problems Conference of the National Furniture Association yesterday urged economies, co-operation in the war effort and finally warned members of the organization "the more you beat your business figures, the sooner you're out of business."

T. Hart Anderson Jr., of New York, predicted that furniture men can stay in business through 1943, that substitute materials for those now on war priorities and economies will help bridge the lack of sufficient stocks. He said the organization had no headache in observing the $25,000 salary limit imposed by the federal government.

Speaking on "Sleep Equipment," Richard N. Schwab, vice president of the Southern Spring Bed Company, told of substitution of vital materials for manufacture of bedding to such an extent that sufficient bedding will be available to meet needs.

He said wooden hinges are being substituted for steel ones, and that they are meeting the needs satisfactorily.

Roscoe R. Rau, executive vice president-secretary of the national association, said the industry is undergoing a day of trial, but that it will weather the storm, and predicted a rosy future as an aftermath of the war.

Other speakers on the concluding program held at the Ansley hotel included J. T. Ryan, secretary-treasurer of the Southern Furniture Manufacturers' Association, and Robert T. Frazier, of Chattanooga.

Furnish your home at a saving through the large selection of worth-while "Household Goods," all at bargain prices, in today's Constitution.

William Bryden, reviewing officer. The others, left to right, are: Commander Jackson Dick, of the American Legion; Admiral Charles Conard, and Brigadier General E. G. Payton. Thousands of chilly spectators lined the streets to witness the colorful parade.

MARCHING MEN—While thousands of Atlantans deserted their counters and desks to look on and cheer, most of the men and boys left in town marched jauntily in yesterday's Armistice Day parade. The uniformed young men nearest the camera are from Marist College. Practically every other school and civic, fraternal and patriotic organization in Atlanta was represented among the marching columns that thrilled crowds.

addressed an American Legion luncheon gathering at the Ansley hotel.

The flags of all the United Nations were carried by Salvation Army lassies as their band poured out the martial music of the Battle Hymn of the Republic.

State guardsmen held aloft a banner which read: "Japan, the Land of the Rising Sons of —" and closed with a reminder to "Buy Bonds." The bands of Boys' High, Tech High, Fulton High and the Rainbow Girls contributed their marching music along with that of the Fort McPherson Reception Center band.

Civilian Air Patrol planes attracted glances skyward as they flew low over the city, a new, wartime note in Armistice Day parades. Headed by trim, smartly uniformed units of WAVES, WAACS and Red Cross nurses, scores of women marched or rode in the parade. Navy mothers, waving happily from a truck, led the unit of marching sailors.

Virtually every civic, fraternal and patriotic organization in Atlanta was represented in the parade. The city fire department sent two of its newest and flashiest possessions, Chief Styron's flaming car and the new pumper to appear in the line of march.

More Pushes Predicted By General Somervell

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Lieutenant General Brehon B. Somervell, chief of the Army supply, said today there will be "other and greater pushes" than the American invasion of North Africa and appealed for greater effort in the production of war supplies.

Speaking to an assembly of war veterans, Somervell said in an address prepared for delivery:

"I can tell you that our troops in Africa have what they need. While all the free world was shouting for a second front we were piling up the munitions and the supplies, getting them ready for this great push."

He asked all employers to fill their labor needs, insofar as humanly possible, through the United States Employment Service.

Women constitute our biggest single labor pool," he said in an Armistice Day speech prepared for delivery at a luncheon meeting of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce and American Legion, adding "and they can perform many operations better than men."

2 Former Benning Generals Are in the Fight in Africa

COLUMBUS, Ga., Nov. 11.—At the head of the American doughboys storming French Africa under Lieutenant General Dwight D. Eisenhower are two colorful generals who were commandants of Fort Benning last year.

Major General George S. Patton, picturesque armored corps commander, is known throughout the service as "Old Blood and Guts." He is commanding the West African landing. Major General Lloyd R. Fredendall, who was commander of the "Rollin' Fourth" division and for a time commanding general of Fort Benning, is in charge at Oran.

Both General Patton and General Fredendall were popular and well known figures in Columbus as well as at Fort Benning. A portrait of General Patton, showing him in a tank, hangs in a service club at Benning. His habit of "roaring around" in a tank when most generals use a staff car was developed at Fort Benning.

He is considered an inspiring leader of men, a fighting general to the core and an expert on cavalry and armored warfare. Called a "colorful individualist with a smoking tongue and will-to-victory belief that it takes guts, not machines, to win wars," the general is known for a mule-skinner's vocabulary. He is a graduate of West Point, is 57 years old and has been in the Army 30-odd years. He was at Fort Benning from July, 1940, until this spring.

General Fredendall was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1907. He assumed command of the "Rollin' Fourth" Division on October 22, 1940, and for a short time was commanding general at Fort Benning, leaving when the division was transferred.

HOW IT'S DONE—Atlanta's own Axis Crackers heard yesterday an eyewitness account of sea and air battles in the Pacific from Captain Marion C. Robertson, former chief of staff to commander of Pacific Scouting Fleet. Left to right: Navyator Frank Garrison Jr., Captain Robertson, and Navyator Erwin Wall.

motored fighters swept the skies in thorough protection of the bombers and the pursuing Eighth Army on the ground. RAF fighters were reported to have shot down one Messerschmitt and an Italian Macchi out of six enemy planes encountered yesterday. Four British aircraft were reported lost in all operations.

Absence of news of the struggle inside Libya led military observers to speculate on the possibility that General Montgomery, instead of continuing a direct pursuit of the disorganized Nazis, might be setting a trap that would cut them off well short of Tripoli.

General Archibald Wavell, they pointed out, demonstrated nearly two years ago the feasibility of an overland dash directly across Cirenaica to a point on the coast road near Agadabia.

One source estimated that Rommel, when finally brought to major battle again, might have as many as 100 tanks and 60,000 troops of all classes at his disposal. This figure was considerably higher than previous estimates.

moved from Charleston to Atlanta.

The luncheon, given at the Athletic Club, was in honor of 51 Atlanta lads on the eve of their beginning preflight training at Tech and at the University of Georgia.

Long War Foreseen.

"We are in for a long war," continued Captain Robertson. "We shall first win by attrition and then by overwhelming force. We must possess our souls with patience, but no power on earth can prevent our victory."

Venturing into prophesy, the captain indicated the United States would first eliminate Germany before concentrating for the final knockout of Japan.

"Russia will bleed the German armies to death, then take the offensive. As the second front starts moving towards Germany Hitler will be overthrown by his generals. Possibly Yugoslavia will be the first of the Axis dominated countries to revolt, then Norway and the others. The Japanese may not be defeated by this time, but they will have been driven back home for a last stand against concentrated United Nations forces."

The captain then pointed out weaknesses in popular theories regarding air power and the alleged obsolescence of battleships and aircraft carriers. He said a fleet probably would not venture into an area controlled by land-based planes, but pointed out there were areas which even the bomber with the longest range could not reach. "Long-range is obtained at the sacrifice of other fighting qualities," he said.

"As they near their target," he continued, "heavy bombers grow more vulnerable, for the most effective damage to ships is done by dive-bombing and with the launching of torpedoes, both of which methods were developed by the American Navy. Now as to the battleships, suppose the aircraft carriers of opposing fleets have been sunk, and the ships meet in old-fashioned naval style. In that case, the side with the most battleships should win, for battleships can 'take it' and they can dish it out."

Carriers Valuable. He went on to say that, despite its vulnerability because of the large quantities of gasoline and other explosives it must carry and because of its large deck, the aircraft carrier is still the most useful ship we have.

"We have lost four carriers," he said, "but the Japs have probably lost twice that many. We have 13 building, four of which have already been launched. If we had had 20 last December, the Japs would not have attacked us."

Robertson then paid a tribute to the deadly work done especially in the Pacific by another vulnerable type of craft, the submarine. He told a story, now current in the fleet, of a submarine lying on the bed of the ocean with depth charges bursting all about it.

To the 51 future naval aviators, Robertson said:

"Good hunting. Happy landings!"

Fred Singleton, president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, presided at the luncheon, which was sponsored by the Atlanta Civilian Naval Aviation Committee and 15 civic organizations. R. W. Schilling introduced the speaker. Other guests included representatives of the Marines, the Army, the WAVES and the WAACS.

Church Group Opens Session In Newnan

Bishop W. A. Fountain
Presides at 42d
Conference.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

NEWNAN, Ga., Nov. 11.—The 42d session of the Atlanta-Georgia conference of the African Methodist church was opened today with Bishop W. A. Fountain presiding assisted by Bishop John A. Grege, of Kansas City.

The Rev. H. E. Thornton, E. P. Yopp and B. C. Carswell were elected secretaries, and the Reverends A. U. Freeman, D. B. Borow and N. Maddox were made marshalls. The Rev. S. H. Rome was elected conference treasurer, with Dr. R. E. Romour, chairman of the finance committee.

Annual Sermon. The Rev. H. Jackson, pastor at Turner Methodist church at Atlanta, preached the annual sermon. During the sermon he urged ministers to return to the old way of right living.

Bishop Fountain in the opening address told ministers to put preaching of the gospel first.

The Rev. L. H. Hemingway, of Washington, D. C., secretary of the church extension department, spoke of the department that is building churches over the A. M. E. connection.

The conference will observe missionary anniversary Thursday night. Friday night will be educational night.

Church Reports.

Bishop Fountain warned young ministers that those who are not in school and pastoring in or near Atlanta will be replaced by other young men transferred to attend school at Morris Brown College.

Pastors of the south Atlanta district made their reports during the afternoon. The Rev. W. R. Wilks, pastor at Allen Temple, made a full report from his church. For the eight years, he reported his church almost clear of debt with more than a hundred persons joining the church during the year. The Reverends R. H. Pector, David Norris, W. J. Jenkins, W. B. Shiver, J. O. Childers and A. R. Smith also made full reports from their churches.

Billy De Beck, 'BarneyGoogle' Cartoonist, Dies

Introduced Many Popular Slang Phrases in Comic Strip.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP)—William Morgan "Billy" De Beck, 52, cartoonist who created "Barney Google" and many other comic strip characters, died today after a long illness. His wife was at the bedside.

De Beck began his famous comic strip, in which many contemporary slang phrases were born, in 1919 when he joined King Features in New York.

The strip introduced the immortal "Spark-Plug," a quint-eyed race horse which in cash earnings outran Cavalcade, Gallant Fox, War Admiral, Sea Biscuit and many other turf stars.

Added to these characters were the moonshining mountaineer, "Snuffy Smith," his wife, "Lowie," and a group of comical hillbillies. De Beck, one of the speediest of modern cartoonists, also drew "Bunky," a monstrous-nosed infant who matched wits against the notorious viper, "Fagin."

The cartoonist was credited with introducing and popularizing such phrases as "Heebie-Jeebies," "Jeepers Creepers," "Horse Feathers" and "Sweet Mama."

Born in Chicago, De Beck began his art career when in high school.

Surviving is his widow, the former Mary Louise Dunne, whom he married in 1927. They had no children. De Beck maintained homes here and in St. Petersburg, Florida.

Restrictions on Lead

Are Eased by WPB

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Restrictions on the use of lead, least critical of the important metals, were eased today by the War Production Board to permit a number of essential uses heretofore prohibited.

The order removes restrictions on the use of lead in certain building supplies, in foil for industrial babbitt, in certain food packaging, in lead sheathed cable, in caskets, and in nameplates for industrial machinery.

The Business Opportunity column in the Want Ads of The Constitution furnishes a fertile field for small investment and profitable effort.

When Present Stocks of New Cars Are Sold,
THERE WON'T BE ANY MORE! If You're Going to Need a New Car for Essential Work—BETTER APPLY FOR ONE NOW.

RIGHT now, Buick dealers can offer you selection from complete stocks of unused 1942 Buicks built before automobile production halted.

But every week that goes by increases the number of cars now in use that simply must be replaced in the very near future.

These cars can be replaced only from existing stocks. If you regularly drive a car in really essential service, don't take a chance on finding present stocks exhausted by trying to get the very last mile out of it.

Turn it in, for use by some other essential user who doesn't drive as much as you do.

New-car buying regulations are aimed at conserving both new cars and cars now in use. They also seek to put new cars in the hands of those who need them most.

Thus if you can show real need—now, while cars are available—you can get a permit to buy now, while cars can be bought.

Permits to buy won't do any good when there are no cars to be had!

Your Buick dealer will be glad to give you all information on new-car buying regulations and procedure. At the moment, he can make immediate delivery to qualified buyers on almost any 1942 Buick model.

But because Buick factories have been all-out on war production for many months, your dealer won't be able to help you when cars now available are sold.

Better see him NOW about applying for that car you're going to need.

IF YOU ARE INCLUDED IN THIS LIST YOU'RE ELIGIBLE
There are seven major classifications for persons eligible to buy new cars under basic rationing rules.
These include: (1) persons engaged in the production of war materials or the prosecution of the war, directly or indirectly; (2) physicians, nurses, clergymen, veterinarians; (3) car-owners engaged in public service, such as fire departments, public health, highway maintenance, etc.; (4) owners of taxicabs and other means of transportation; (5) farmers; (6) newspaper wholesalers; and (7) traveling salesmen in certain fields.
Your Buick dealer will be very glad to help you determine whether you come under the rules of eligibility. He will also be glad to help you fill out the proper applications.
Don't guess about your eligibility—see your Buick dealer now and make sure.

Air Service Command Aide Visits Atlanta

General Miller and Wood Highly Pleased on Tour of Depots.

By KEELER McCARTNEY.
Supply and maintenance of United States warplanes are "keeping abreast of the expectations of combat units the world over and will continue to do so," Brigadier General Lester T. Miller, chief of field services for the Air Service Command, said here last night in an interview at the Georgian-Terrace hotel.

General Miller and General Robert E. Wood, a civilian advisor to the Air Service Command and a veteran of World War I, arrived in Atlanta last night on an inspection tour of airplane service and storage depots.

They were met here by Colonel Donald R. Goodrich, commanding officer of the Third Air Service Area Command, with headquarters in Atlanta. The visitors flew down from Washington yesterday to inspect an air depot, near Macon, and then flew to Atlanta.

Highly Pleased.
"We are highly pleased with the depot," General Miller said. "It is quite an addition to our vast maintenance and supply setup." The supply and maintenance of United States planes, General Miller continued, is "keeping abreast of the expectations of combat units and will continue to serve United States combat units wherever they may operate."

"Industry is meeting the deadline requirements of combat troops," he said. "The United States armed forces are moving on schedule on world fronts."

The stocky general, who served with the United States Infantry during the first World War and then transferred to the Air Corps when that division was removed from the Signal Corps in 1920, was enthusiastic about the quality of American planes.

U. S. Planes Best.
"We have yet to observe anything to create a spirit that American planes are not the best in the whole world," he said. "The world is using them with good success—except the Japanese, Germans and Italians."

"I don't suppose either of those three would particularly appreciate the quality of our planes," General Miller, a native of Marietta, Ohio, is a graduate of the Command and General Staff school at Fort Leavenworth, the Army War College at Washington and tactical schools. His headquarters now are located at Patterson Field, Ohio.

ATLANTA HAS MOVED OUT OF TOWN

STOP and think of the many people you know whose establishments are now on the edge of town, instead of in the center. The War Agencies have taken over whole office buildings.

Atlanta has moved out of town. That brings on a new transport problem. Once you could see everybody within a few blocks.

But not any more. And if your business is urgent, as most business must be urgent today, that calls either for your own motor-car or a taxi.

Your tires are thin and your gasoline is rationed.

You try to ride the common carriers, but they do not go—except round-about—to the places you must visit in a day's business.

So the Taxicab becomes a vital element in your direct action life.

If you appreciate the Taxicab, help us save it. We must make every mile a useful mile. And the way to do so is to let us have advance warning of your Taxicab needs.

When you want a Yellow Cab, call Walnut 0200 as far ahead as you possibly can, and be ready when it comes. Then we can overlap trips, avoiding the "deadhead" miles which eat up rubber and gas uselessly.

If you want Taxicabs in 1943, get the habit of 15 minutes' notice.

Parachute Fire Attack, Freeze Cheer Soviets

Russians Soon Will Be Able To Walk Across the Volga.

By EDDIE GILMORE.

MOSCOW, Thursday, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Cold weather and a bold parachute fire raid on a German airbase cheered Russians today while their lines held firmly all along the front.

The broad picture was one of limited activity and increasing cold that is counted on to simplify the Red's defense problems; particularly at Stalingrad, and multiply the hardships of the German invaders.

Dramatic spot of the high command's midnight communique was the brief account of a parachute raid on a Nazi Black Sea airport which told how 23 enemy planes were put to the torch, 13 of them being destroyed and the others damaged.

Soviet bombers flew over this target several times to bring on the lights and start the anti-aircraft guns to banging and then attack planes dived in to smash the lights and silence the cannon.

Immediately after this "parachutists jumped from transport planes and then landed, set fire to planes on the airfield and then made their getaway."

The high command said several attacks were repulsed in the Stalingrad sector but reported only 200 Germans killed, indicating that these thrusts were in relatively light force.

German thrusts also were declared to have been turned back in the Tuzape area along the Black Sea and sharp tank fighting was reported southeast of Nalchik in the eastern Caucasus, with no German advances acknowledged.

In the Stalingrad area the Reds also took the initiative in one assault, reporting that two Hitlerite companies were wiped out in this action and in addition more than a platoon of Germans came over voluntarily to the Red army.

The banks of the Volga were frozen, and great chunks of ice in the middle of the stream pre-empted an early freezing that would aid the defenders of the battered city. The Stalingrad garrison

General King Awarded Oak Leaf Cluster

Atlantan Directed Rear Guard Action on Bataan.

The coveted Oak Leaf Cluster has been awarded by the War Department to Major General Edward P. King Jr., of Atlanta, who directed the desperate rear guard action on Bataan and who is believed to be a prisoner of the Japanese, the Associated Press said last night.

A veteran of more than three decades of Army service, General King is 57 and holds the Distinguished Service Medal for services in World War I as principal assistant to the chief of field artillery through much of 1918.

He had been in the Philippines for more than two years, reporting there on September 14, 1940, to command the Army post of Fort Stotsenburg, north of Manila. General King was promoted to brigadier general soon after arriving in the Philippines and last December 18 was advanced to major general.

The latest reports from Bataan indicated that General King and his men, hungry and exhausted, finally fell into Japanese hands. Tokyo claimed capture of the general on April 14.

Numerous accounts of the accuracy and effectiveness of the artillery fire directed by General King at the invading Japanese brought high praise for the Atlantan.

A graduate of the University of Georgia, the general served in the Georgia National Guard in 1905-8 and was commissioned in the regular Army in 1908.

General King's wife is staying with the general's brother, J. Olmstead King, at 736 Piedmont avenue, N. E.

shortly can be supplied vast quantities of material across the frozen river.

Yesterday's midday communique told of sharp fighting Tuesday southeast of Nalchik, when German infantry with tank support attacked Russian positions in an attempted drive toward Ordzhonikidze, northern terminus of the Georgian military highway through the Caucasus mountains.

U.S. 'Chutists Made Record Hop For Airborne Assault on Oran

By WES GALLAGHER.

U. S. Correspondent with A. E. F. in Africa.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN FRENCH NORTH AFRICA. Nov. 11.—(AP)—American parachutists staged the longest air-borne invasion in history when they flew in transport planes 1,500 miles nonstop from England to participate in the assault on Oran.

It was disclosed tonight that the parachute troops, led by Colonel Ed. Raff, of New York, 34-year-old West Point graduate, and wearing camouflaged battle suits, boarded planes early Saturday night and flew continuously for eight hours across Europe and the Mediterranean to land at dawn Sunday near Oran.

None of the parachutists except Raff knew when they started where they were going.

Major General Mark Clark, in discussing the feat, said "I called in Raff and told him what we planned and asked him if he thought it possible. He said 'Give me some time to think it over.'"

"I had to leave the office, but in a few moments he came back and left me a note," the deputy supreme commander said. "It read: 'We can do it. But first I want my own battalion to do the job and I want personally to lead them.'"

Both requests were granted. Despite the long night trip the troops arrived fighting fit.

The longest known previous air-borne troop movement was in the Norwegian invasion when the Germans flew parachutists from fields near Namsos to Narvik, which is less than 400 miles. Nazi parachute troops attacking Crete had only a short jump.

Man-Power Problem

Indications are that the man-power problem now facing the nation will, at first at least, be left to voluntary methods for solution. All authorities, including President Roosevelt, the War Man-Power Commission and leaders of organized labor appear to be agreed that the time is not yet here when compulsion will be necessary to provide workers for farms and factories.

President Roosevelt stated on Tuesday that, by the end of 1943, the nation's armed services would number 9,700,000 men. This means that almost 4,000,000 more men, chosen from the nation's finest manhood, must be inducted into Army, Navy, Coast Guard or Marines within the next twelve months.

At the same time, workers must be found to keep up, and increase, the food supplies from the farms of the nation, to cultivate other crops essential to the war program and to work in the fast-expanding war industries. Some of those needed workers will come from the ranks of the women of the nation. Some will be supplied from the younger people, as they reach the age when they are capable of such labor. But there remains a gap between the need and the supply which must, somehow, be closed. It is to be hoped it can be closed through the voluntary patriotism of Americans. If it cannot thus be solved, however, laws will of necessity be passed to meet the emergency.

One important contribution to the total man power in industry can be made by voluntary relinquishment, by labor, of the 40-hour maximum work week. It is true that too long hours result in reduced efficiency, to the point where output is actually lowered. There is a happy medium, a point of work-hours at which the worker is at the top of his productive potential. That point, however, is not at 40 hours. It is far higher than that.

Furthermore organized labor can voluntarily aid in the solution of the problem by seeing there is no interruption in production caused by strikes or work stoppages from any cause. There are still too many strikes for a nation at war. And it is still true that the worker who deserts his lathe, his bench or assembly line in war industry is guilty of desertion in the face of the enemy.

There are, too, thousands of persons still unemployed who can, if they will, contribute their work to the cause of victory. These are those who cling to their pre-war easy way of life. They must learn there are jobs to be done and that there is no American today, regardless of former position in life, who would not be honored by working in overalls, in any capacity that contributes to the total war effort.

The news from North Africa and from Europe is good, so far. It marks the probable turn of the tide in that theater of war. It should serve to spur the nation, every soul among us, to new and grimmer determination than ever before to do our utmost for the cause.

It is not the guns or armament
Or the money they can pay,
It's the close cooperation
That makes them win the day.
It is not the individual
Or the army as a whole,
But the everlasting teamwork
Of every blooming soul.

Look Who's Talking

A German broadcast from a Paris radio station warned all French people not to "spread news without regard for the truth." Furthermore, the announcer asserted that the only true reports on the situation in North Africa were those published by Nazi-controlled French newspapers and French radio.

When Nazis scream that news reports from Allied Nations sources are "lies," it is nothing more than amusing. For so long has all the world discounted everything said by the Nazis, for so long have they deliberately spread their lying propaganda, that no one, any more, believes a word they say. Like General Giraud, of the free fighting French, who said he wouldn't take a Nazi pledge on anything, even if they swore to it on the name of Hitler himself.

It is, however, illustrative of the state of jitters into which the Axis has been thrown by the North African developments. When they can do nothing but scream "lies" as the news comes in, they are indeed hard pressed.

But the people of France and other occupied countries know the truth. That, after all, is what counts. As the Nazis will discover.

Shop Early

There are special and urgent reasons, as this second Christmas with America at war draws near, why the annual appeal to do Christmas shopping early must be heeded.

The mail service has been directly affected by the war, the same as all other establishments. Many of their trained employees have been called by the draft or have volunteered for the armed services. It is difficult to replace these men. Not only because of the general scarcity of workers, but because their duties call for training that cannot be given overnight, in a week or a month.

Furthermore, with all the nation at work, with several million in the armed services in this country, there will be a tremendous increase in Christmas packages going through the mails. True, the time has gone when such packages could be sent, in time for Christmas, to our boys overseas. But they can still be sent to those in the camps in this country.

There will be, under such conditions, inevitable delays in the handling of the mail. The post office and all its workers will do the best they can. But there is limit to human possibilities. Some mail will certainly have to wait its turn.

With this situation in view, Postmaster Lon Livingston has asked that all mail for Christmas delivery be mailed from 20 to 25 days in advance. This means your Christmas packages, your Christmas cards, should be mailed not later than December 1.

Furthermore, business houses are requested to withhold, if possible, heavy mailings of advertising matter, catalogs, calendars, etc., in December.

The mails, as a matter of fact, are already swamped and have been for months. Unless there is fullest public co-operation, along the lines asked by Postmaster Livingston, the situation will be tragic during December.

And, to all who have not yet purchased their Christmas gifts, there is another reason for early shopping. The stores now have good supplies of gifts of all types. But, under curtailed civilian production because of the demands of war, there is no chance for replenishment of stocks in many lines. If you don't buy now, you probably won't be able to buy what you desire a month hence.

With Full Approval

The Office of Price Administration has reduced, by ten per cent, the quota of beef for civilian consumption during the current quarter, from October 1 to December 31.

Reason, our armed forces are not now receiving sufficient beef to meet their requirements.

There is scarcely a family in the United States today which is not represented, in our armed forces, by some member. If there is no member of the immediate family in uniform, there is at least a neighbor youth, or cousins or fellow workers or other close connection.

There is not a family, surely, which would not gladly give anything it has, go without anything at all, if it's own boy in the Army needed. That boy, today, comes first in all family problems.

Therefore, without hesitancy or equivocation, if our armed forces need beef, if there is not enough for them and for us at home, too, there can only be one response by all of us to the beef restriction imposed by the OPA. That response is, the action meets with the full approval of everyone.

Georgia Editors Say:

THE RUBBER PROBLEM
(From The Dalton News.)
The recent Washington announcement which said it is now hoped that enough rubber can be provided to keep all civilian cars going, is extremely encouraging. For the first time, the people have been given something beside "official" rumors and conflicting statements. And for the first time, it looks as if the government is going to attempt to solve the rubber problem with speed and efficiency. In this connection, the work and the policies of Mr. Eastman, head of the Office of Defense Transportation, and Mr. Jeffers, who has charge of the rubber program, are particularly outstanding. These men are demonstrating conclusively that they want results and mean to get them.

Economists who have studied the situation carefully have long been convinced that the rubber problem is not insoluble. Very important progress has been made by the soil industry in developing usable synthetic rubbers, and it is an unfortunate fact that this phase of the program has been held back by political indecision. Other kinds of rubber, with special properties which make them valuable for various purposes, are being successfully produced from coal, grain alcohol and other materials. American inventive genius, in short, is doing a fine job in finding ways to offset the loss of natural rubber.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

HITLER GETTING PANICKY? WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Nothing better illustrates the momentous importance of the war developments in Africa than the defeatist tone of Hitler's latest speech and the open statement of a Fascist commentator in Rome that "the horizon is black for Italy."

A year ago none of this could have happened. Hitler was charging about with his usual blustering claims of victory. The Russian army had been destroyed, he solemnly assured the German people.

Now he displays an apologetic tone that reflects a panicky frame of mind over the unfavorable turn in war events. He was apologetic when he referred to the failure of the Germans to take Stalingrad. A note of defeatism crept into his voice as he told how he had looked on with a heart filled with grim wrath as German cities were being bombed to destruction.

But perhaps the most significant passage in his speech was that part in which he contrasted himself with the late Kaiser and declared the government was now headed by a man who would not run away if a critical situation developed. He was referring, of course, to the Kaiser's flight to Holland at the close of the last war.

Well, as most observers here see it, Hitler must have been turning over in his mind the possibility of a similar situation arising in the affairs of the Nazis. Otherwise there was no apparent need for him discussing it.

FUTURE HANGS HEAVY Despite the bravado, the bluster and the veiled threats it contained throughout, diplomatic observers were in a stronger position than anything yet uttered by Hitler. The events in Africa were hanging heavily over him as he spoke.

But far more amazing is the broadcast which Rome officials permitted to go out over the radio to the Italian people Sunday night. After declaring that "the horizon is black for Italy," a Fascist commentator was allowed to warn that Italy's war effort is in a bad position, and "we must now expect attacks from any quarter."

The Fascist commentator's appraisal of events is far more open and more accurate than Hitler's. Its purpose seemed to be to prepare the Italian people for the worst.

RIPE FOR FALL Italy has been a ripe apple ready to fall from the Axis tree for some time. Only the presence in the country of some 250,000 German troops and Gestapo agents has kept the nation in the war. Now she has lost the cream of her army in Africa. Her fleet has long since been battered into uselessness by the British in the Mediterranean.

Taking over of the entire Mediterranean front of North Africa puts the United States and Britain in position to shake the Axis tree. Italy's days in the war are doomed. From our newly acquired position we can see the end of the Italian empire in destruction. It should be a comparatively simple task now to lay down an invading army in the domain of the clowning Mussolini.

The Fascist commentator at Rome must have realized all of this only too well. What he was doing was warning the Italian people of their plight.

TIDE HAS TURNED So long as Rommel's forces held in Libya and Egypt, Italy had no real cause for concern. Only a few months ago the Italians were so confident that Mussolini had planned a grand entry into Alexandria that they were even talking of a grand entry of the Allies into Italy. The tide of war has turned that quickly.

The more the grand strategy of the Allied African move is considered, the more important it appears. Competent military experts are already proclaiming it the crucial turning point in the war. It marks the end of the Axis in the defense of the offense. It foreshadows in clear outline the second European front.

PLAN HUGE FORCE When this is done, we and the British Africa of perhaps two or more million men. It is as easy for us to send them there as it is to England. Once this force is built up to the proper level, the firework for Hitler will begin in earnest. The whole Mediterranean soft side of the continent of Europe will be open for a thrust. To meet the threat, Hitler must move his forces over thousands of miles of European coast line—from Norway to Greece. This will take immediate pressure off the Russians.

Moreover, control of the Mediterranean permitted by the African developments means that Allied shipping facilities will be increased five or sevenfold. Heretofore we have had to send ships the 13,000 or 14,000 miles around the Cape of Good Hope to reach Suez and Middle Eastern points. Now the route will be direct. This is a tremendous factor alone.

ON POLITICAL SIDE One final word is appropriate on the political side of the new American move. Had our forces struck a blow more than they did, the news undoubtedly would have influenced the recent elections, which saw the administration almost lose its majority in congress.

If President Roosevelt had been willing to play politics with the war, he easily could have ordered the plans advanced for this purpose. The fact that he didn't should be conclusive evidence that no politics are being permitted to enter into the war effort.

It is a forceful answer to the half-backed patriots and political self-seekers who have sought to confuse the country with their asinine charges on bungling of the war effort.

By RALPH T. JONES.

Men of Many Nationalities

The war news is making us all more conscious of the men of many races and nationalities who are taking part.

No longer is a Greek merely a pleasant sort of fellow, speaking American with an accent, who runs a restaurant. He is a fighting fool who won our admiration by his marvelous courage when the Axis attacked his homeland.

No more is a Russian an ill-clad, bearded barbarian. He is a neat, well-trained and heroic soldier, worthy comrade in arms of our own.

A Norwegian isn't just a blond squarehead, a decent fellow who spends his life as seaman of an ocean-going tramp steamship. He is a smart, quiet young fellow, determined and grim, learning to pilot a plane in this country, so that he may play his part in the coming liberation of his enslaved, quivering country.

No longer is a Chinaman a pig-tailed talker of pigeon English who launders our shirts or serves us chop suey at a restaurant table. He is the bravest, best fighter we have ever heard of and he, too, is our very worthy comrade in arms.

There are many others. List them for yourself.

Those I Remember.

But this trend of thought has brought back memories of my boyhood days in England, in Liverpool. Of the men of various races and nationalities I saw there.

To all intents and purposes there were no Negroes in Liverpool. Oh, an occasional one, direct from Africa, more often not. Such a rarity, however, they called for a turning of heads and a curious look when, once in a month or two, one or two were seen on the street.

One morning I saw three crack regiments of Indian army come to take part in the celebration of Victoria's Golden Jubilee, the sixtieth anniversary of her reign, parade through the Liverpool streets. I'll never forget them.

A regiment of Gurkhas. Little, stocky brown men, with grinning, happy faces. Carrying a part of their regular equipment, that native Gurkha knife with which they can, it is said, sever a horse's leg with one blow.

A regiment of Sikhs. Tall, fine looking men. With straight, classic features, though their skin is near black. I don't believe a man in the regiment stood less than two or three inches above six feet.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Must Be Worthy? NEW YORK, Nov. 11. Senator Claude E. Pepper horned the keynote of much current speaking and thinking on the subject of our relations with Soviet Russia when he told the congress of American-Soviet Friendship, whatever that is, last Sunday that "It behooves us to be worthy of such a friend as Russia."

That kick-me-I-love-it attitude runs through the utterances of the keynotes of the congress of American-Soviet Friendship, whatever that is, last Sunday that "It behooves us to be worthy of such a friend as Russia."

Pepper, of course, can be disregarded. He has neither authority nor standing with the people of the United States and in his own state of Florida he is known as an ordinary machine politician with none of the qualities of a statesman.

The hard fact of the case is that Russia is fighting for her life and not for ours and has done nothing for us in this war. Everything Russia has done she has done for herself, and while it is very fortunate for us that Hitler was fool enough to tackle Russia and thus get his armies chewed up by an opponent whom he, the Russian, of the world, grievously underestimated, the truth remains that altruism was no part of Russia's motive in going to war.

Lucky Day June 22, 1941, was a lucky day for the United States and Britain, too, and the Russian people have been wonderful fighters on our side.

But what is the reason for this business of our debt to Russia, anyway? What about Russia's debt to us? They were Americans, or many of the best of them were, and not Communists, either, who went to Russia and provided the Russian people with the material and the money that built up Russia's industries, and a glance at the map will show that it is the fighters of the United States in the Pacific who are keeping Japan too busy to attack Russia now.

No American would be fool enough to say, nor any Russian fool enough to believe, that the U. S. A. took on Japan just to help Russia, but it is just as silly to suggest that Russia has any other motive in fighting Germany than to avenge Adolf Hitler, win back what he has taken and, presumably, to shove into Germany after the collapse and teach the German people a lesson they have been needing for a long time.

Undoubtedly Stalin and the Russian people have been a little sore at us because we couldn't get at the Nazi while they couldn't keep out of his way. That is understandable, and probably the heat will cool from now on as the war proceeds in Africa, and, as it is hoped, later moves over into Europe through Italy.

People Don't Know How much war material and machinery we have sent them, or whether we could have sent more, the American people just don't know because the government can't tell us without telling Hitler, but it is a cinch the Russian people don't know any more than we do about it. But it could be mentioned that we would have been in a position to send quite a lot more if the dirty communists in the United States hadn't engaged in deliberate sabotage of our earlier efforts to change over from the works and methods of peace to those of industrial war.

Yet I don't hear anything on the subject from Willie, Davies or Henry Wallace, and I call to mind the fact that President Roosevelt left the chief conspirator, Earl Browder, out of prison where he belonged, as a means of promoting unity. Since when has our justice, the beautiful free system in which even an enemy gets a fair trial before a decent court and an unbiased jury and has the right of appeal, been intended to promote unity? Our system is intended to administer justice and has no other legitimate purpose, but this enemy within was given his freedom as a political favor.

Joe Davies is a pretty big-talking man these days because he spent a short season in Moscow as our ambassador. But if he is so crazy about Russia it is strange that he spent so much of his time running around in other European countries in which we were supposed to be well represented and got out as soon as his store of patent pemican was exhausted.

It is all right to profess unity and understanding between the American and Russian people, but this stuff about our great debt and our unworthiness of Russian friendship gets annoying.

Turbans made them appear even taller. Impassive faces, ideal for poker players. Soldiers every inch of them and showing every second their pride in being fighting men of high repute.

And a regiment of Punjabis. Well drilled, neatly uniformed, too. These men. But it is against their religious belief to permit cutting of the hair on their bodies or the hair of their heads fell in long tresses below their shoulders and everyone of them boasted a thick, curly black beard.

Picked regiments of the British India Army. I have thought of those men I saw march through Liverpool so long ago, many times as I read of the part played by their successors in Egypt, in Malaya, in Burma and other theaters of this war.

Now We'll Find Out? What hold Vichy has on the French people may be determined within the next 48 hours.

Germany has broken the terms of the treaty, as she has broken the terms of every occupied that portion of France which was unoccupied.

The United States has announced that it gave recognition to the corrupt Vichy government, dominated by Laval, only to obtain time in which to prepare for the invasion of Africa and the French territory—with the pledge that no territory would be annexed to this country. The people were informed as to our sole purpose.

The two factors inevitably will call for a choice. What remains of the French fleet must decide whether it will go with Germany or with the United Nations. The French fleet does not like England. This is a personal matter. It is believed the French fleet will join the Allies.

We will know very little about the people of France and their preference. The entire country is occupied. No news can come out of France. If there should be a wave of sabotage we likely would not learn of it.

That is important. But not decisive. The French people can help but not decide. People, even if they have the will, cannot revolt against machineguns and tanks without those weapons for use in the revolt.

What is important is the French fleet. What remains of it would be of very great importance to the United Nations. We will soon find out if Vichy France was, as they said, merely the Fascist and anti-British representation of Laval and Darlan, or if it represented the sentiment of the fleet and the armed forces.

HITLER NOT SURE That Hitler was not sure of the French reaction is plain. He declared twice in his statement to Marshal Petain that he hoped there would be no additional spilling of blood in fighting between France and Germany.

The statement was a cynical one, highly imitative of President Roosevelt's statement to the French dominions in Africa. It did not in any place indicate that Germany would restore all France should Hitler withdraw his troops. Not even in the event of a German victory did he indicate France would be restored. All he said was that once the danger to the Reich was done he would withdraw to the demarcation lines which existed between occupied and unoccupied France.

The French have no means to resist. They can sabotage, and some will. But it is not possible to know to what depth the French feeling goes.

The Germans have been sending back French soldiers, carefully selected from the numbers of peasants and small shopowners who might be counted upon to return home as conservatives. They have been taking, in exchange, radicals from the French factories. It has appeared as if the French desire to have her captive soldiers return home. At the same time it removes to the interior of Germany those French who might dare to lead saboteurs against the German occupation.

There is no telling how impressed, or defeated, the populace of Occupied France has become since, and during, the occupation. It is a very interesting situation.

And, as aforesaid, we will know more when we see how the French fleet and the French in Africa react to the occupation of France by Germany in violation of the armistice and the treaty resulting from that armistice.

WHAT WE MAY EXPECT The race for Tunis is important. That area could become a thorn occupy it with men and planes.

Land-based planes could harry the whole African expedition. They perhaps are doing so now.

Nevertheless, the news continues good. Rommel is, if the British reports have not been exaggerated, defeated. He cannot receive much help as the chief German objective seems to be Tunisia. The job will be to prevent Rommel's 30,000 to 50,000 men, with their remnants of tanks and planes, from reaching Tunisia.

If he can be driven out of Libya, as he has been driven out of Egypt, then it will be fairly simple to put the pincers on Tunisia. The whole invasion is too tremendously important to the Marines of Italy can be reduced to rubble within a short time and without too much cost.

Greece and Italy will be invasion possibilities. It will not be easy.

It may be assumed that all the submarines the Italians possess, at least 100; and all those the Germans possess, more than that number, are on the way to the eastern Atlantic and to the Mediterranean.

If the French fleet should join them the situation would be made much more difficult. The real fight has not yet begun.

How much fighting there will be depends on the French fleet, the Italian ability to muster submarines and planes, and the German effort to put sufficient forces in Tunisia.

Meanwhile, the pressure on Russia has eased. That was one objective.

Our Hitler, we must supply line. The Germans know this. We have got to keep a constant flow of great amounts of gasoline, oil, ammunition, food, tanks, trucks, and other supplies to that front.

Here Lie Brave Men, Needlessly Sacrificed by Stupid Leadership

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

You will remember the years when Jap agents combed America for scrap metal. In one period of 12 months they bought and shipped 2,000,000 tons. There was protest, but officials did nothing to stop it.

You will remember when the selective service act passed by a margin of only one vote; when congress limited the Navy to 3,000 planes, and refused to fortify Guam and Alaska.

You remember the "sneak attack" on Pearl Harbor. Millions still think it came as a complete surprise, but Lieutenant Dickinson, naval pilot, told a different story in his Saturday Evening Post article. He revealed that his carrier left Pearl Harbor nine days before the Jap attack, to deliver combat planes to the Marines on Wake Island. The ship sailed under strict war orders to preserve secrecy at any cost—to shoot down any Jap plane seen in the air and sink any Jap sub found in the sea. Thus our men were under orders to start the war, if necessary, nine days before it began. The Navy knew what was coming.

Why, then, was it caught asleep? Because the admiral in charge could not believe the Japs would attack us. He never dreamed of a bombing attack, for he thought in terms of ships—not planes.

Blunders did not end with the coming of war. Both civil and military officials have continued making costly and inexcusable mistakes. In one black night we lost three of our best cruisers as a result of neglect and incredible carelessness. To be defeated is enraging; to be outsmarted is discouraging and unbearably shameful.

It is not pleasant to think about these things; but we must think about them for they all add up to a warning of certain and awful disaster.

Men without understanding or foresight or ability to adopt new ideas cannot develop new minds when war comes. Can we obtain smart leaders only as disaster exposes the stupidity of those in power?

We are not a stupid people. The Japs are tricky, but they are not smarter than we are. We have smart men in abundance—efficient, courageous, quick-thinking, shrewd men—and our commander-in-chief must somehow be persuaded to find them and give them power before it is too late.

Bravery can't win—heroism can't save us—if men trusted with power are stupid or inefficient.

"You'd better join up, boys—there's no meat rationing in the army!"

Papers say 42,000 spectators are expected to the Tech-Georgia football game in Athens on November 28. Everything sold out, including 8,000 additional temporary seats. That's fine. I'd like to be in the football business. It beats opera and concerts or a newspaper job.

It is hardly the province of this column to enter a controversy over whether sports events should continue in war time. Like almost everything else it has two sides to it—or maybe three.

I like to see the people carry on as usual—or as nearly as usual as times will permit—have a good time, go to pictures, go to ball games, keep up their morale.

But I can't help thinking about rubber—at a time when we're all being urged to conserve it. The gasoline doesn't disturb me, because that is rationed and football visitors have the privilege of using up their coupons anyway they like.

It's approximately 70 miles from Atlanta to Athens, which means 140 miles round trip. I have an idea that two-thirds of the football crowd will be Atlantans. Much of the remaining third will be Georgians and folk from neighboring states whose mileage will be equally as great.

Special trains are out. Chartered buses are out. Regularly scheduled trains and buses are jammed with every-day traffic. So what? Are these visitors from 70 miles away going to hoof it? Think what that would do to the shoe leather supply.

So it may be assumed they will travel by automobile. Even with five passengers to a car that's going to take a lot of cars. And a lot of rubber.

Oh, well, life must go on. And if Bill Smith is willing to wear out his tires on such a trip that's his business. But when a couple of them have blown beyond repair—oh he'll wish he hadn't.

Darn it, if I had a ticket and a free ride I'd like to go along myself. But not in my car.

You Can't Beat It.

Man on the Oglethorpe trolley the other day was pouring his troubles into the unresponsive ear of the man beside him. Sitting just behind I got my share.

"I'd get along pretty well, in spite of business being off," he was saying. "If I could get straight with my household affairs."

"It isn't that my wife is extravagant. Indeed, she is most economical. But I can't make up my mind whether she is the dumbest woman about money the world has produced or the shrewdest financier in town."

"What's the special complaint?" asked his seat mate.

"Well, it's like this," said the complainant. "I give her a regular weekly allowance which is supposed to cover grocery bills and pay the maid and laundress. She is supposed to run the house on that I pay the rent, gas, electricity, water and telephone bills.

"She considers the allowance fair enough. So that's all right. But when my phone bill comes in I find three long distance calls I know nothing about. She explains that some kinfolk were out home and used the phone and paid her for the calls."

"Occasionally there's an item from the drugstore I can't understand. Same thing. You have no idea how these little things stack up."

"But don't the folks pay her?" asked his companion.

"Sure, they pay her," returned the complainant, bitterly. "They pay her—but she doesn't pay me. And I have to draw checks for the bills. The only way I see to get even is to find her handbag when she's not looking and grab all the money it contains."

"Why don't you?" asked the other man.

"I tried, once," explained the disgruntled husband. "The bag had 17 compartments, each containing everything but money."

"And I forgot to say that a couple of times a week she phones me to stop by a store and buy something for her and bring it home, thus saving gasoline and tires. And I do. I'll bet I buy more groceries and 10-cent store gadgets in a week than she does. And pay cash for them. And do I ever get it back? If you're married you know the answer to that."

"Yes, I know," said his seat mate. "I've been married 20 years."

Moved Indoors

For a long time Mrs. Ed A. Caldwell, who is the wife of the editor of the Walton News, has penned an interesting column for their paper. It has been called "From My Screened Porch."

She has moved indoors, and now it is "From My Living Room Window."

Yes, she, it gets pretty cold out on a porch in November. Screens or no screens.

"We have heard that constant dropping of water on stone will in time wear the stone away. Now comes one of our farmer friends and says the chickens have about pecked his axe handle to pieces. AN ERA OF CHANGE.

On that trip to south Georgia last week, about which I wrote in yesterday's column, I was impressed, as every Georgian must be impressed, with the evidences of the era of change through which we have been passing here in Georgia within the lifetime of many of us. Georgia, at the close of the 19th century, was predominantly agricultural; Georgia, in the first half of the 20th century, has developed rapidly toward an industrial community. You can scarcely find a county seat town today that does not have several industrial plants. Many of them have major industries, with large industrial communities exceeding the population of the original town or city.

When you look at these smokestacks and these villages grouped about them, spreading the original town limits to twice the proportions of the 19th century, you know that something has happened there that has far-reaching effect. It begins to explain many empty dwelling houses out on the h.g.w.ay. It offers some explanation for many evidences of decadence on these farms—dilapidated fences, barns, tenant houses—fields grown up in brush and sage—figures revealing our dependence upon other states for bread and meat and milk. It doesn't require a Philadelphia lawyer or a Yale economist to get that answer. You can't take the best brains and the ablest bodies away from the farm to man these industrial plants without paying the price.

The swing of the pendulum in the teens and 20's and 30's was marked. I do not need to dwell on that, further than to acknowledge it. Nor do I intend to raise any howl about it. It was inevitable, I guess. I do believe that we should have worked at the job of meeting this era of change at the very moment when the tide set in, but that is water under the bridge. Happily, we have started to work now. There are ample evidences ready at hand. We are beginning to realize that we can't sit down and wait for Washington to settle the whole problem, grateful as we may well be for some of the things Washington has done about it. It is a problem that we must largely work out for ourselves. Paternalism is not the answer.

The schools are beginning to train boys and girls toward the farm instead of away from the farm. Likewise the press. A wholesome arrangement by which people can live on the farm and work in these industrial plants is spreading. That will save us many griefs from outside pressure groups. We are doing more for the Negro, I am happy to observe—providing better schoolhouses, better dwelling houses, better understanding between the races. That is absolutely essential. We are awaking to the indispensable place of the country church for both the white and colored races. The horse and buggy is coming back, and eggs and milk and many other good things that went for gasoline yesterday will tomorrow go into the stomachs of the people who live on the farms. Health, we are discovering, is a tremendous asset. The dignity of work is being rediscovered and appreciated. The deadly philosophy of getting something for nothing has been pretty well exploded. We have passed through an era of change, which almost destroyed us; but we appear to have opened our eyes to the facts in time. Let us hope so.

WPB Reorganized by Nelson; Eberstadt Given New Post

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(P)—Chairman Donald M. Nelson reorganized the War Production Board anew today, concentrating all responsibility for the allocation of materials and their actual distribution directly under Ferdinand Eberstadt.

Eberstadt, former New York investment banker, acquired the title of program vice chairman. The change placed Ernest Kanzler, who was director-general for operations, directly under Eberstadt in the WPB high command.

A simultaneous move was the creation of labor advisory committees, to be made up of labor spokesmen from every industry, to advise each of WPB's 36 industry branches. WPB long has had industry advisory committees. This move followed demands of labor groups for a bigger role in WPB. It was accompanied by elevation of the industry branches to the status of industry divisions, with enlarged powers of estimating the materials needed by each industry and controlling the allotment of materials.

The WPB requirements committee, which divides the country's materials among various needs, will have 36 small counterparts, one assigned to each industry division. Each of these "subrequirements committees" will have a spokesman from each of the seven "claimant agencies," which seek supplies—Army, Navy, Maritime Commission, Lend-Lease Administration, Board of Economic Warfare, Aircraft Scheduling Unit and the WPB Office of Civilian Supply.

A program bureau was set up under Eberstadt to act as a staff for the requirements committee in assembling figures on materials supply and the needs and to make recommendations for balancing one against the other. It will be headed by Donald D. Davis, Wayzata, Minn., president of General Mills Company, Minneapolis.

BRITISH CONSUL THANKS ATLANTANS FOR GIFTS

Editor, Constitution: I recently learned that a large box of clothing has been sent to Britain by the British War Relief Society consisting of 407 garments for children. These include 36 warm woolen dresses, 20 heavy lined coats and the rest are all warm underwear. In each pocket is a small toy for a Christmas present.

I was greatly touched when I heard of this, and I know that the recipients of these gifts in Great Britain will be deeply grateful, especially since the present fuel shortage in Great Britain makes warm clothing doubly welcome.

The many Atlantans who have given time and labor to prepare this clothing can be sure that they will spread much happiness and comfort among British children. Since the actual recipients cannot write to express their gratitude, I feel that I must act on their behalf to thank all the various Atlantans concerned. From my recent visit to Britain, I know how invaluable such gifts have been and how deeply they are appreciated. I, therefore, very much hope that you can spare the space for this message of thanks.

CONVICTS AS SOLDIERS WOULD RUIN MORALE

Editor, Constitution: Referring to a recent article on the ex-governor in which he advocates the use of prisoners or convicts as soldiers in war, I was never so appalled in my life. . . . in four years with the U. S. Marines and a year with the Army I have a little more respect for the military profession.

The right to bear arms in the defense of one's country is a privilege that is not given to anyone but citizens, and is relinquished by dishonorably discharged men back in the old days the military salute was originated by freemen in the Middle Ages. . . . free men were the only ones allowed to bear arms.

I can think of few things that'd destroy morale quicker.

Aviation Gas Output Called 'Near Miracle'

Really Spectacular Job Done With Existing Facilities, Ickes Says.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Harold L. Ickes, the war petroleum co-ordinator, reported today that the rapid expansion in production of 100-octane aviation gasoline in the United States was a "near miracle."

He recalled that in the summer of 1941 the nation was "dangerously short" of capacity for such gas, that the output then was only about 40,000 barrels a day and that the oil industry agreed to double, then treble and quadruple production.

"I wish," he added, "that I might make public, as a tribute to your industry, the present production of 100-octane because it represents a near miracle."

"The construction of new refining units is proceeding with all the speed that is consistent with our difficulty in getting essential but scarce materials."

"However, the really spectacular job is the one that has been done with already-existing facilities. The output of these is more than 50 per cent greater than any one had ever dreamed of when the war began."

"It is this gasoline which made possible the victories of the Coral Sea and Midway; the gasoline which carried Marines over the Solomons; the gasoline which opened that new front in Algeria, which chased Rommel out of Egypt, and which makes possible the destructive raids over the industrial centers of the Nazis."

Ickes' remarks were in a speech he prepared for the annual meeting of the American Petroleum Institute. But he was unable to attend, and his address was read by W. Alton Jones, of New York, president of the Cities Service Company.

Motorists Urged To Get Tire Forms

Motorists were urged by regional OPA officials yesterday to secure tire registration forms which, it was announced, are now available at local rationing board offices and filling stations.

Frank H. Merritt, regional mileage rationing chief, said the deadline for motorists in Atlantic seaboard states to file the forms with their local board is November 22.

The forms may be mailed or taken in person to the boards by the motorists in these states in which gasoline already is rationed. They require the listing of the serial numbers of each motorist's tires, or of the make of the tires if the numbers cannot be read.

Women Who Quit Jobs Lose Benefit Eligibility

Married women who quit their jobs to follow their husbands to distant cities are not entitled to benefits under the state compensation law.

Judge Hicks Fort, of the Muscogee county superior court, holds that even if the woman accompanies a soldier husband who is transferred, she leaves her job voluntarily and can not draw compensation.

The case in point was where a woman, who worked continuously for eight years with a manufacturing company, quit to accompany her sergeant husband to another city when he was transferred. The company contended that her job was waiting for her whenever she wished to return to it, and that she had voluntarily removed herself from availability. Judge Fort sustained the contention.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT FACE PIMPLES

These disfiguring spots affecting the outer or surface layer of the skin often result from a temporary, minor disturbance, or from incorrect cleansing.

You can relieve the itchy, burning soreness and thereby help your skin by using an ointment whose medication stays in active contact with the pimply spots. Apply it every night and leave it on all night. It does a world of good.

For 45 years people have used Resinol Ointment to fill this need. It soothes the irritated oil ducts where many surface pimples start, and so aids healing. Carefully cleansing the skin with Resinol Soap helps to quicken the pleasing results. Its gently active lather is refreshing and it rinses easily.

they should decide to help the Allies.

A British source said it would take months to get the contingent at Alexandria ready, even if there were French crews to man the vessels.

The British admiralty contradicted Axis reports that the British had taken over the ships at Alexandria contrary to the gentlemen's agreement by which they were demilitarized.

"Reports issued by the German radio that the French squadron at Alexandria has been taken over by the British navy are entirely without foundation," an admiralty communique said.

Besides the Lorraine, the cruisers Fugay, Trouin, Suffren, Duguesse and Tourville, and at least one submarine are at Alexandria.

Decommissioned.

They were in that port when France fell in 1940 and were decommissioned by agreement. All vital operating parts and breech locks of their guns have been removed and impounded by the British. Only skeleton maintenance crews are aboard, most of the original complements having gone home or joined the Fighting French.

"It would take more than a year to put those ships to sea with British crews aboard," the British spokesman said. "The general public seems to think that once you have a warship of any nationality in your hands you can just put a crew aboard and sail away."

"That's not true. And that's why Hitler has never wanted French naval ships as such. German crews could not operate and fight French ships successfully without long training."

The Fighting French already have two battleships on the Allied side, the 22,189-ton Paris and the Courbet, at least five destroyers and four submarines and numerous minor warships.

Major General Mark Clark Virtually Works While Asleep

Fulton County's 4-H Clubs Help In War Effort

Organization Collects Scrap, Buys Bonds and Forms Victory Squads

The achievement of Fulton county's 4-H Clubs in furthering the war effort were detailed yesterday by County Agent S. D. Truitt, and Miss Frances Shelton, home demonstration agent.

The boy and girl members of the clubs, numbering about 1,880, have collected thousands of pounds of scrap, bought $3,375 worth of war bonds and stamps, formed many "victory squads" to relieve the farm shortage of labor, and taken part in many new neighborhood leadership organizations.

This week having been designated National 4-H Club Achievement Week, by President Roosevelt, 4-H clubs throughout the country have been taking stock, said Truitt. He emphasized that regular projects have not suffered because of the new club work.

In the salvage campaigns, 650 boys and 530 girls collected 902,000 pounds of metal, with the biggest campaign still under way; 36,590 pounds of rubber; 2,100 pounds of burlap, 350 pounds of rags, and 1,260 pounds of aluminum.

So eager to get into first World War on graduation from West Point in 1917 that, when suddenly stricken with appendicitis, his mother located a crack Mayo Clinic surgeon at Walter Reed hospital. . . . Special job done on Clark so that by the time transport landed in Europe he was able to lead his company.

Has always shunned popular Army habit of sitting at desk shuffling papers. While on general staff he spent as much time as possible away from Washington. . . . Got around the country to see troops for himself at the rate of 60,000 miles a year.

Only recreation is walking. . . . In Washington used to do a lot of it at night with son William, 17, and daughter, Anne, 16.

En route to Europe last spring paused in Washington only long enough to arrange West Point nomination of his son. . . . Worrisome business as the boy was not a resident of any state. . . . At last minute, son got on as a congressman's alternate nomination. Through this break was admitted. Will be fourth successive generation of family in Army. . . . Friends believe it one of the happiest developments of Clark's career.

Lawlessness In Nazi Move Cited by Hull

Secretary Hesitates To Predict France Will Join Allies.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Secretary of State Hull today characterized Hitler's Armistice Day invasion of unoccupied France as a move in complete harmony with Germany's fixed policy of lawlessness and utter disregard of the most solemn obligations.

He hesitated to predict, however, that it would immediately bring France back into the war on the side of the Allies. Replying to questions at his press conference he suggested it would be advisable, before attempting to evaluate the situation, to assemble the full facts and all angles of the picture.

He referred to radio reports that the French people were considered to be back in the same status as they were before the Franco-German armistice was concluded in June, 1940—in other words in a state of war against Germany. However, he emphasized official reports still were awaited, and for that reason it seemed advisable to withhold further comment.

In reply to another question, Hull said the government had not yet had any word of the disposition or status of the French fleet. Some news dispatches indicated that three battleships, seven cruisers, a seaplane tender, 25 destroyers and 27 submarines still were based at Toulon; others that most of this force had put to sea headed for an unrevealed destination.

In connection with Marshal Pétain's protest to Hitler against his violation of the armistice, a reporter asked if the government considered this protest against Hitler's move had cancelled, in effect, Pétain's previous protest against American landings in North Africa. Hull answered there was as yet no official information on exactly what was happening in France proper, and that he preferred not to discuss this and other interesting questions until all the facts were at hand.

Admiral Warns War Workers On Old Errors

U. S. Must Not Repeat Mistakes, Conard Says Here.

Promising the "mistakes of the war to end all wars which ended 24 years ago, will not be repeated in the present conflict," Rear Admiral Charles Conard, chairman of the interdepartmental war savings bond committee, yesterday told several hundred American Legionnaires, Army officers and others connected with the prosecution of the war, that all Americans must ration themselves severely if this country is to remain on an even keel during and after the war.

Declaring that anyone who buys things at excessive prices is impeding his government in the prosecution of the war, he told the group that the new slogan for the pay roll savings plan for the purchase of War Bonds is "Top That 10 Per Cent by New Year's."

His praise was high for the quota set for November by the American Legion in the state to sell at least $9,000,000 in bonds. Calling the action a manifestation of the "indomitable spirit of Georgia," he said that that spirit is needed in this crisis.

Sounding the knell of "business as usual," he declared that Americans are the kind of people who seldom make the same mistake more than twice.

"Twice before in recent years," he said, "we have made the mistake of attempting to carry on a war without changing our ordinary way of life, once in the first World War and again at the commencement of this one. We must now choose another way."

Sharing honors with Admiral Conard was Captain Damen J. Gause, of Winder, whose thrilling 159-day journey from Bataan to Australia has been spread across the front pages of the nation. Caught behind the Jap lines when Corregidor fell, he had an opportunity to observe the enemy's "domestic life" during war time.

He related the Jap troops had their families along, and trouble some they were, too, he recalled, when he and another soldier were kept awake all night by the howls of one of their babies. His opinion of the Japs is that they are not so tough, but are vicious, cagey and quick to act—not to think.

"I believe a lot of their spirit comes from the bottle," he declared. "They will fight to the death while they are winning, but I have an idea they will throw their arms away and run, crying like babies, when they begin to lose. I have seen them do this on occasion."

He brought to the luncheon yesterday the faded American flag and the Philippine standard which flew at Corregidor, as well as a Japanese flag which he employed to shine his shoes, while the crowd cheered.

Other honor guests included Major General William Bryden, commanding general, Fourth Service Command; Lieutenant Commander G. Gordon Fisher, Admiral Conard's executive officer; Lieutenant Commander J. M. Sweeney, who introduced Admiral Conard; Mrs. Gause and Trammel Scott, who acted as master of ceremonies.

Nelson Says Advertising Is Important Job

Termed 'Essential Part of Our Communications System.'

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Advertising is an "essential part of our communications system," a system which the government has "no remotest desire" to destroy, Chairman Donald M. Nelson, of the War Production Board, asserted tonight.

Nelson said the future does not hold a bright picture for the individual businessman, but "the picture is not wholly black either."

At a dinner meeting of the Association of National Advertisers, he said:

"I see no reason why any man

Britain's Silent Church Bells To Ring for Victory in Egypt

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(AP)—For the first time since June, 1940, Britain's church bells will ring Sunday in thanksgiving for the Eighth Army's victory in Egypt. Church bells were silenced by the government when Hitler's invasion threat hung low over these islands and were ordered rung only in case of attack.

should assume, now, that no scope is going to be left for the free exercise of his talents; I see no reason to assume that the field is going to tighten up so much that advertising will not still have an important job to do in the distribution of goods.

"For advertising, I must repeat, is an essential part of our communications system. We dare not destroy or cripple that communications system in wartime, and we have no remotest desire to do so."

The WPB chief prefaced his address with a warning against a too-optimistic view of war developments. "What is happening in Africa is only a beginning, not an end," he cautioned.

The American economy is vital enough and flexible enough to crush the enemy without itself breaking down in the process, Nelson said.

AMA Places Augusta Unit On 'Probation'

Medical School Status Restored Conditionally by Council.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 11.—(AP)—The University of Georgia School of Medicine has been restored to the approved list of medical colleges in a probationary status by the American Medical Association. Dean G. Lomard Kelly received word of the provisional restoration in a telegram from the council on medical education and hospitals of the association. Dr. H. G. Weiskotten, association secretary, recently visited the school here.

Medical Colleges recently took similar action. The School of Medicine was dropped last year after two members of the University of Georgia faculty were discharged by the Board of Regents following charges by Governor Talmadge that they were advocating racial co-education.

Battle Flags

for Philco Soldiers of Production

AMONG the far-flung manufacturing facilities of Philco Corporation, devoted 100% to the manufacture of war equipment, four ARMY-NAVY "E" FLAGS now fly from the Philco plants. And each of their soldiers of production wears the official Army-Navy "E" Pin as a badge of honor for "distinguished service to America."

On four separate occasions... in Philadelphia, Pa., Trenton, N. J., Sandusky, Ohio and Chicago, Ill. ... distinguished officers of the Army and Navy have presented the Army-Navy Production Award to the men and women of Philco for their achievements in producing the weapons of Victory—or, as expressed by the Under Secretary of War, "for accomplishing today what yesterday seemed impossible".

Of course, Philco is proud of its soldiers of production who have turned their knowledge and their skill so effectively to the service of the nation. In the manufacture of intricate communications equipment, powerful radios for tanks, airplanes and ships, artillery fuzes, shells and storage batteries, Philco's war production activities serve every branch of our fighting forces, on land, at sea and in the air.

The Army-Navy "E" Flags that now fly above the Philco plants are symbols of the vital partnership between our soldiers of the front and our soldiers of production. More than that, they are battle flags for America at home, symbols of the devotion and sacrifice beyond the line of duty which are the price of Victory.

To the men and women of Philco, these battle flags are a challenge and a responsibility. For they realize that if America's might is to strike the decisive blow for Victory, what they have done today must be but an inspiration for greater deeds tomorrow. In this spirit, Philco soldiers of production have made their pledge, "More—Better—Sooner!"

Knox Tells Veterans Second Front Is Now 'Wide-Open'

McKEESPORT, Pa., Nov. 11.—(AP)—Secretary of the Navy Knox, declaring that a second front was now "wide open," said tonight America's part in this war had just begun and that there was "a long, hard road stretching beyond this Armistice Day to that other day when we will celebrate, God willing, not an armistice, but a victory."

Britain Poised For 'Knockout,' Churchill Says

Allies Ready To Smash Across Channel When Reich Weakens.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(AP)—The moment Germany becomes "demoralized" by Allied pressure in Europe and Africa she will be struck by invasion across the English channel or North sea, Prime Minister Winston Churchill promised the house of commons today, while the Nazis were overrunning all of France.

"An attack which will be made in due course across the channel or the North sea requires an immense degree of preparation," the prime minister told the electrified chamber. "All this is proceeding, but it takes time."

"Of course, should the enemy become demoralized at any moment the same careful preparations will not be needed. Risks could be run on a large scale."

In a message ringing with optimism, Churchill told the house it could be sure "that many things are going to happen in the next few days," and sounded an ominous warning to the Nazis' nervous ally when he said "we shall shortly have far greater facilities for bombing Italy."

It was necessary at times for the prime minister to depart from his set speech, as news of important events continued to reach him even as he addressed the opening session of parliament. He told commons that the news of the fall of Casablanca to American forces was given him just as he entered the chamber.

"Today news reaches us that Hitler has decided to overrun all of France," he said, "thus breaking the armistice to which the Vichy government had kept such pitiful and perverted fidelity at the horrible cost even of sacrificing their ships and sailors in firing on American rescue ships."

"Here is the moment when all Frenchmen should sink personal views and rivalries and think, as General de Gaulle is thinking, only of the liberation of their native land."

Describing Axis losses in the battle of Egypt as "mortal," he said that the wide encircling movement of British and American forces in North Africa had as its primary object the "exposure of the underbelly of the Axis, especially Italy, to heavy attacks."

Churchill revealed that on his first trip to Washington after the United States entered the war the project of an American operation in North Africa was advanced by President Roosevelt, and that he agreed it was the correct strategy. Plans were completed, he said, when General George C. Marshall, American chief of staff, and Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of naval operations, came to England last July.

In outlining Britain's "enormous" preparations to invade the continent, he reminded commons that the German army in France was "as large, apart from the (British) homeguard, as ours in Britain," though not so well equipped.

He said that invasion preparations had been "greatly advanced," and that "enormous installations have been and are being brought into existence at all our suitable ports." He declared, however, that it would have been "physically impossible" to have made an effective invasion across the continent during the past summer or autumn.

Churchill admitted it was with some trepidation that he flew to Moscow in the summer to notify Premier Stalin that the Allies did not plan an invasion of the continent in 1942.

"Although the news that I brought was not welcome and not considered by them adequate, nevertheless the fact remains that we parted good friends, and in the words which Stalin uses, complete understanding exists between us."

Russian Courage. "The Russians bore their disappointment like men. They faced the enemy and now they have reached the winter successfully."

In recounting the difficulties of transporting great quantities of supplies to Russia, Churchill said that 77 warships were required to protect the last convoy to Murmansk. This was another front, he said, which had been "very costly" to maintain. The cost, though, was fully justified, he added.

"My heart bled for Russia. I have felt what almost everyone in this house must have felt—that intense desire that we should be Speaking at an American Legion Armistice Day observance here, the navy chief called for vastly increased production of war materials to feed the armies now fighting all over the world and said he had been told by both production officials and workers the increase could amount to 20 to 25 per cent without increasing hours of labor or reducing profits.

Telling Blow to Enemy. "A 25 per cent increase in production would be equal to adding an army of millions of additional trained workers," Knox declared. "Such an addition would be a telling blow to our enemies, bringing nearer the day when 'this, too, shall pass away' and we can address ourselves to the problems of peace."

Of the campaign in North Africa, the secretary said: "A second front is open—wide open! This week we have launched an historic undertaking. The stakes in Africa are of incalculable magnitude to us and to all the United nations—and to France, that great and ancient empire; the benign friend of our infancy as a nation and our heroic companion in arms in the first World War."

Will Rise Again. "Stricken France will struggle to her feet again. Great races are not so easily enslaved, and when the Axis oppressors crowd the exits of the world the proud banners of the French will be flying again in the forefront of the victorious free peoples of the earth."

Knox said he recently had read a "weighty and scholarly analysis of some of the factors which are supposed to be retarding production," and that the authors, whom he did not identify, had drawn three conclusions as to those factors.

He presented them but said that he did not thereby endorse them as "sound conclusions."

"But if they are, I believe they are problems which can and must be solved," Knox declared.

"First was reluctance on the part of labor to make an all-out effort and sacrifice, because it believed that management would not make a like sacrifice. In addition, labor was demanding an increased voice in war production as the price of increased effort."

"Second, and equally important was the dissatisfaction of management over profits, and the fear that labor's gains were of such growing magnitude that they threatened the very existence of management itself."

"These are the two major findings of factors which are retarding production."

"The third was a distrust among groups of both management and labor of certain elements of our war leadership, particularly of so-called 'brass hats.'"

"Now these objections and protests are all valid and understandable, according to the angle from suffering with her and that we should take more weight off her. Everything that he (Stalin) said about the disproportionate burden thrown upon them was perfectly true."

"The Russians have borne the burden and the heat of day."

Jap Ovi Force Routed, Faces Entrapment

Aussies Driving Nipponese Into Hands of U.S. Paratroopers.

GEN. MACARTHUR'S HEAD-QUARTERS, Australia, Thursday, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Japanese forces have been routed at Oivi and face entrapment while another enemy group at Gorari has been enveloped and destroyed in battles for control of northeastern New Guinea, the high command announced today.

As the climax of a week-long battle at Oivi, 55 miles southwest of the coastal base of Buna, Australian troops which have been battling their way across the Owen Stanley mountains, forced the Japs from their positions, inflicting heavy losses.

But the Japs' only course of retreat is into the hands of American troops which were flown by aerial transport to the vicinity of Buna.

Allied planes bombed Jap coastal bases at Lae and Salamaua, on the north New Guinea coast, above Buna, and also attacked supplies and troop concentrations between Oivi and Buna.

"The enemy was forced from his main positions near Oivi with heavy loss," the high command announced.

"His retreat has been blocked by our enveloping troops astride the main track and he is endeavoring to cut his way through to the rear. Simultaneously our forces enveloped and destroyed enemy forces trapped south of Gorari."

MARINES EVERYWHERE. Virtually every community in the United States has contributed some of its sons to the ranks of sea soldiers. There is hardly a city or hamlet where its veterans are not living.

SMITTY—OVER THE FENCE IS OUT

which they are viewed. Labor's complaints are perfectly logical to management's to management."

The secretary added, however, that the American soldier, sailor or Marine "who is now fighting and dying that we may live" can demand the best which the nation can give and must receive it.

"I will not admit," he declared, "and I do not believe management or labor could or would countenance any delay in production if they stop to consider that the price must be paid in prolongation of this agony of war, and ultimately in American blood."

As for the "brass hats," Knox cited the fact that from President

Roosevelt down many of the top men in the management of the war had sons in the forces and added that he himself had served now in three wars.

Syrup Is Being Made In Hancock County

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.—SPARTA, Ga., Nov. 11.—Cane grinding is the order of the day all over Hancock county. Some farmers are grinding upland sorghum cane while others are grinding the old-fashioned red ribbon cane. The syrup is cooked in large pans, as it has been done for years, as there are no commercial plants for making it by new methods in this county since the syrup is made for home consumption.

You Are Last To See Your Extra Pounds

By Ida Jean Kain.

You can put on pounds almost to the point of obesity before you see yourself getting fat. That's why it comes as a shock when someone tells you how well you look with more weight.

The friend who makes that remark is invariably one who hasn't seen you for a few months. Her mental picture of you as you were is still vivid and she can see the change. You take on weight so gradually that the people you associate with every day are not apt to notice it. For the same reason, you blithely ignore what happens to the lady in the mirror.

But as soon as you are aware to the danger of moving into the stylish stout class, do something about it. Don't drift along until you sell yourself the idea that you are not very overweight, or that perhaps you look better that way. No woman looks or feels better overweight for her structure.

After you are aroused to action, it's almost as hard to see good food in terms of pounds as it is to see yourself putting on too much weight. You know it takes excess calories to make fat but you don't think of these as coming from fried chicken, candied yams, hot buttered rolls, or apple pie. It takes determination to keep from belittling the calories in foods you particularly like.

Turn a wary eye on any food that is high in fat for whether you take it in the form of butter, oleomargarine, lard or mayonnaise, fat counts an even 100 calories per tablespoon. Heavy cream comes high, too, at 60 calories per tablespoon. So if you are in the habit of having meat friend, and eating the fat part along with the lean, spreading gravy on the potatoes, adding butter to vegetables, and taking cream in your coffee, you can easily get several hundred calories in a meal that does not seem like too much food. Then, if you finish with a rich dessert, you really take on calories!

You might be getting your surplus calories from sugars and starches. While reducing your 10 to 15 pounds, leave off the rich desserts entirely and eat fresh fruit instead. Also, check up on the toast, bread, and rolls you have at each meal. Whenever you have spaghetti, macaroni or potatoes, take only one slice of bread.

Give your eating habits a critical going over and you can spot the high calorie extras that put on the pounds. Leave these off and you will reduce. But be sure to get your protective foods, every day: Two fresh fruits, one a citrus or tomato juice; a cooked green leafy or yellow vegetable, plus a green salad; a pint of skim milk or one glass of milk and a serving of cream in your coffee; lean meat, fish or fowl; three slices of whole grain or enriched bread; three thin pats of butter.

For a check on the calorie count of various foods, send for the "Complete Calorie Chart." Please enclose large stamped return envelope.

Wife Will Gain But Little From Excessive Apologies.

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie:

I am 38 years old. My parents were well to do and socially prominent in the city where we lived. At 18 I eloped and married a boy of 20 of very poor parents and whose family was not highly regarded. He was quiet, did not drink, smoke or swear, and besides was exceedingly handsome.

My parents were furious and refused to receive or see him. But he was attentive and tender and never spoke an impatient word to me in his life. But he did not have much work and we were grindingly poor. After two years I was invited home for a visit. I did not want to go, but he urged me to. I intended to stay a month, but all were so nice to me and I, fool that I was, dreaded to return to the drudgery and doing without, so I stayed on and on. Finally I was maneuvered into applying for and obtaining a divorce on the grounds of "non-support," though I loved my husband and will till my dying day. A year later I found a letter in my mother's desk from my husband to me that had been intercepted. It was written to me when he was served with notice of the divorce suit, and such a letter! I confronted my parents with it and denounced and disowned them and left their house and went to work.

I tried to contact my husband and learned that through a lucky invention my husband had made money amounting, so I was told, to a fortune. That stopped me from trying to reach him, for I feared he would think I was only after his money.

It had been 18 years since I had seen him, though I devotedly loved him and thought of him all the time. I knew he had never married and I learned had never given marked attention to any woman. A few days ago I learned he was here in Atlanta at the Biltmore hotel. I went there and waited till I saw him come out. I wanted to find out if I would still love him after 18 years, after seeing him. He didn't look a day more than 30 and was, I believe, more superbly handsome than ever, and I just couldn't resist approaching him and speaking to him.

We chatted a few minutes, but he had to hurry away to catch a plane at the airport and said he would be back in a week or so and would call me up. I want you to advise me how to meet him, and, if possible, effect a reconciliation. Do you suppose he will believe me about the letter I found? I know he will call me as he said, for he never told me an untruth or broke a promise to me in his life. Please tell me what to do.

"REPENTANT WIFE."

I do not think that you have a chance of winning your husband back again. I think that the span of years is too great, in the first place, and, in the second place, I do not think that there would be any faith on his part. Having treated him as you did years ago, how would you expect him to believe you and have faith in you again? You did not have the courage of your convictions long ago when you were forced into obtaining a divorce from him. If you had really loved him, you would have stayed with him, and you certainly would not have allowed your family to have had any interference in your marriage. You married him knowing he was poor, and no doubt he was doing the very best he could, but you did not have the character nor the love to stay with him and share with him the life you had promised "for richer or for poorer."

Of course you enjoyed being at home again and dreaded going back to the hard work to your own home, but you had married this man and it was up to you to be his partner and his inspiration. I have no sympathy for a woman who loves her husband and who is influenced against him by others, including her family, and influenced into getting a divorce. During these 18 years you must have suffered and your conscience must have given you no rest for having treated a fine man in such a way. I hardly think that he will believe you regarding the letter which your parents intercepted. I hardly think that he will believe anything that you can say, for I imagine that he is still smarting under the sting of your divorce charging non-support—of all things! You well know that he could during those trying days, and you well know that when you married him what you were getting into. You have not shown any character, for you have turned down the man whom you say you will love until your "dying day," and after 18 years you expect him to take up where you two left off. That is impossible. He has lived all these years without you, and if my guess is right he will continue to do so.

If you see him again, my advice to you is not to make a scene. Do not try to be dramatic about him or about your past life. Your best bet is to let him set the tone of the conversation. You might tell him, however, that you have realized the mistake you had made and that you have lived to see the folly of a youthful act. By all means ask him to tell you about himself and what has happened to him all of these years. Don't weep and cry on his shoulder and beg forgiveness, for a man does not want a weeping woman around him. Try now to display some of the character which you did not display 18 years ago. Let him know very calmly and with all the sincerity that you can muster that you know you made a mistake. Let him know, if you have the time and the opportunity, that it was through your parents that the letter was intercepted. That it was months before you knew that he had written you. You might suggest that you be friends, for I think that is all that can be accomplished. You have made an attempt to see him now, and it is his move, so do not run after him.

MY DAY: A Wren Shares Her Orange Juice

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

LONDON, England.—I was awakened by a very charming Wren, who brought me orange juice. I was so surprised I forgot to protest, but by the time I had reached the other Wrens' quarters, where we were to breakfast, my conscience was bothering me a great deal, for I knew I had been treated to something special.

Even though the ministry of food told me that, for the moment, oranges were more possible to buy, since a big shipment had been received, still I felt guilty. I found, however, that the real explanation lay in the fact that some of our naval officers repay the hospitality shown by the Wrens by sharing with them a few of their oranges which come from the United States. This made me feel a little happier.

One becomes very conscious of food over here. Everyone is urged to eat potatoes, so potatoes usually appear in two forms in every meal. In the factory where I had lunch, there was a wonderful Lancashire pie, which ordinarily has layers of varied meats with potatoes in between. Now they use mushrooms and little scraps of meat they can obtain, and the pie is still good.

Our first visit this morning near Manchester was to an assembly plant, and I must say the factory looked very much the way one would expect. However, we do not have such model cafeterias in every factory. I talked to a number of the women working in this factory. In spite of the long hours, they told me they liked the work and they spoke with enthusiasm and used that ever-recurring phrase, "We have got to get on with the war."

The fact that the government sees to it that children get a hot lunch at school seems to solve the midday problem for any child over five. The women workers all tell me they get tea after they get home and the children get up when they do, about 6 a. m., and have breakfast before they leave.

Washing and cleaning is done one day off in seven, and yet the women told me they were not overtired. They do have an hour off at noon and 10 minutes in the morning and again in the afternoon. I doubt if their hours could be kept up day in and day out, were it not for the satisfaction of doing a job which needs to be done and which is helping the war effort.

After a view of the airfield, where one of the planes was flown for our benefit, we drove to another factory where the making of parts was going on. Here again I had a chance to talk with some girls and met all the shop stewards, as well as saying a word during lunch hour over a loudspeaker system which went to all the different canteens.

The manager, Mr. Dobson, seemed to be a grand person and his workers certainly smiled when he approached. He told me that whenever a man in the services got leave, his wife in the factory had time off. They also were using part-time people in a rather unique fashion. They team them up and tell them it does not matter what hours they choose or when they work, so long as between them they do a full day's work.

Afterwards we went to one of the training centers, of which there are a number scattered around. Here engineers are trained. By engineers, I mean skilled mechanics, draftsmen and inspectors. Many of these are girls, injured men, boys of 16, men from Jamaica and the Bahamas. Those who are trained in making instruments spend about 16 weeks training and the last part is on actual production work. The only training centers which I can think of that are comparable in the United States are the schools run by industry itself, or the National Youth Administration center for young people.

The lord mayor and lady mayoress kindly received us and gave us tea. I had an opportunity to review women representatives from 47 war activities. We spent the night with Sir John and Lady Stophord. He is head of the University of Manchester. This morning we left for Northern Ireland.

Susan Peters Gets Built-Up Part In Next Andy Hardy Picture

By Louella O. Parsons

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 11.—(INS) I want to apologize to Madeleine Carroll right out in print for my article saying that she is planning a return to the screen after having had difficulties with Stirling Hayden. Madeleine writes one of the nice letters I've ever received and tells me the true story. She says:

"I love Stirling very deeply, and I am very proud of him. He is in the Marine Corps in the south. As for my own movie plans, they are there: I rankly would sooner make no more movies for the duration. Admiral Land, of the Marine Commission, has greatly honored me by making me a member of the board of trustees and director of entertainment of the newly formed United Seamen's Service which has been organized for merchant seamen."

"I have a 9 'til 6 job here—a cause in which I can believe and for which I can crusade and it is with complete feeling that I am participating in the war effort to the full extent of my energy."

Both Madeleine and Stirling deserve our greatest admiration for giving up successful careers for the cause which is uppermost in all of our hearts.

Susan Peters, MGM fair-haired child, goes into the next Andy Hardy picture, and because it is not yet titled, the gang is calling it "Andy Hardy Meets Susan Peters."

It is amusing how Susan happens to step in as Mickey Rooney's vis-a-vis; before she became such a hot shot in "Random Harvest" and "Assignment in Britain" she appeared in a few brief scenes at the tail end of "Andy Hardy Steps Out" as a co-ed who catches his eye. The new "Hardy" will carry on their puppy love story from there. But you can mark it down that Susan will have a well built up part with Mickey—much better than the other gals have had.

Greer Garson says she will have to see "Random Harvest" all over again. While she and Richard Ney and her mother were looking at the picture, the telephone kept ringing asking for a verification of the reports that she was to become Mrs. Ney. Richard said: "One of the calls came just at the moment when Ronald Colman had a love scene with Greer, and I wanted to see Colman's technique."

because he's my favorite actor." Whether or not Greer marries Ney is known only to her. He has two rings, an engagement and a wedding ring, waiting for her and his furlough is only for a few days longer, so she'll have to make up her mind. I have an idea, somehow, they will slip away and get married just before he leaves.

Injection Treatment Successful for Hernia

By Dr. William Brady

I became interested in the ambulant or injection treatment for hernia (rupture or breach) when I saw some articles about it in your column (writes B. L. A.). So I wrote a prominent doctor here who replied that there is not enough evidence as yet to show whether this new method is at all effective. (Signed—B. L. A.)

This letter is dated October 11, 1942—not 1492. The "spokesmen" for the old guard have become so habituated to it that they just can't get their eyes open and learn that the injection treatment of hernia, in most progressive communities, is now the method of choice in a good majority of all cases coming under treatment. It has proved so satisfactory in thousands of cases in everyday practice that no physician who is capable of using common sense or judgment can possibly question the value of the method, not if he has the best interest of his patient at heart.

There was a time, 20 years ago or more, when the consensus of medical opinion in this country was overwhelmingly against ambulant treatment of hernia. I shared that opinion then. I was trained to believe the radical operation was the only treatment which could cure hernia.

Then I learned of a physician who had for several years employed injection treatment for hernia, and I found that a good many of his patients were cured and remained cured years after they had received the treatment.

I got behind the method and recommended that physician to many readers who inquired about it.

Later I asked the physician to inform me what medicine or solution he used for the injections, and unfortunately the doctor, who had probably suffered a good deal from the persecution of his colleagues, saw fit to keep his formula secret, although I assured him I would not divulge it to any one without his consent. I pleaded with him to take a more liberal attitude, but he remained adamant, and so I had to break with him.

Later I found other physicians doing excellent work in the ambulant treatment of hernia, and these physicians freely shared their knowledge with me and with any physician of standing who was interested in the method.

Today the ambulant treatment of hernia is solidly established and it ill behooves anyone who purports to be abreast of medical progress to say the method is not satisfactory in suitable cases. One might as fairly frown on the idea of undergoing the radical operation for hernia in a case which requires operation.

Physicians who have the gumption to decide for themselves whether the injection treatment has merit will find an authoritative description of it in the classical textbook "Hernia," by Leigh F. Watson, M. D., published by C. V. Mosby Company, St. Louis, 1938.

Atlanta Man, Sister Held in Griffin Death

J. H. Witherington, 47, Mrs. Thaxter Face Murder Charge.

An Atlanta man and his sister, a Griffin mill worker, were being held in Griffin jail last night following the slaying of a 21-year-old Carl Walker, another mill worker, in Griffin on the night of October 16.

According to Captain S. W. Roper, of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation, the two were arrested yesterday in a Griffin restaurant following almost four years of investigation by GBI officers and Griffin police.

They were listed as Mrs. Rosa Mae Thaxter, 30, of Griffin, and J. H. Witherington, 47, of Atlanta. Mrs. Thaxter was found unconscious in front of his home in Griffin at about 6 a. m. on the morning of October 17. Taken to a hospital, he died that night of a brain hemorrhage.

Several arrests were made at the time, Roper said, but every clue except one proved false. A bracelet was found under the body.

A microscopic piece of the bracelet revealed pieces of fiber from a hosiery mill, Roper said. A check of the mills was launched and it was found that Mrs. Thaxter, an employee of one of the mills, had not been at work since October 17, Roper continued.

She was also missing from her home. Mrs. Thaxter, wife of a Marine who is stationed in a western state, was located by Z. J. Clyburn, investigator for the GBI, on November 9 at the home of her mother-in-law in Macon. Clyburn talked to her at the time and left, Roper reported.

Roper said that he held a consultation with J. H. Harper, Griffin chief of police, and F. E. Strickland, solicitor of the Griffin circuit court, and the pair were taken into custody yesterday.

The pair admitted putting Walker out of their car in front of his house on the night of October 16, but both claimed that Walker was drunk, Roper said.

Story of How FBI Captured Saboteur Told

Details Bared on Haupt Case at Treason Trial of Six.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—(AP)—The story of how federal agents trailed and captured a Nazi saboteur and recovered some of the money he brought from Germany was told to a jury today at the trial of six German-Americans of treason charges.

Earl Hirsch testified that he and other FBI men followed Herbert Haupt, the saboteur, around Chicago the night of last June 26, and arrested him the following day at the Weber Street elevated railroad station on the north side.

Haupt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hans Haupt, and four other defendants are accused of assisting young Haupt, who was brought to the United States on a Nazi submarine on June 17. The Haupt youth and five confederates were executed August 8 in Washington.

Another FBI agent, Joseph W. Kriofsky, told the federal court jury that he searched the Haupt home on the night of June 27 and found a brown envelope containing $2,550 in $50 bills under a rug in the bedroom of Haupt's parents.

Frank Meech, an FBI investigator, said federal agents went to the home of Carl Eggert, a friend of the Haupts, and that Eggert gave them $170,000 most of it in $50 bills—by their German superiors, who directed them to use the funds in carrying out their sabotage mission in this country.

CIO Demands Full Share in War of Output

Resolution of Convention Asks for Part in All Agencies.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—(AP)—The CIO emphatically demanded a full share in the war of production today during a convention which adopted a resolution calling for participation "in all the administrative agencies which make and execute our war policies—and at every level."

Nearly all the prominent CIO leaders supported the resolution from the floor and President Philip Murray declared: "I feel the delay in winning the war is directly the result of the fact that labor has not been allowed a fair share of the administration of the war effort."

Criticism of the handling of ship cargoes came from Harry Bridges, California CIO leader, who said "wine, champagne and brandy" had been placed aboard some vessels in place of war materials.

Some ships destined for abroad, he added, had been "half-loaded with whisky" and had become known as "booze and banana ships."

He said some vessels had been delayed days on end because of lack of planning, improper use of equipment and improper use of space.

The resolution seeking further participation in the making of war policies came after Senator Pepper, Democrat, Florida, had demanded a centralization of war mobilization and had deplored utterances by "the leader of a great nation . . . that indicated that considerations of empire had not been eliminated from the objectives of war."

Murray hit W.P.B. In a later interview with newsmen, Senator Pepper alluded to Prime Minister Churchill and declared he was sure the British premier did not intend to forget humanity "and become a spokesman for empire."

Murray, adding briefly to speeches by several CIO leaders, said: "I'll tell you frankly and candidly, if one agency needs wholehearted intelligent reorganization it is the War Production Board."

"I told Donald Nelson that the situation was reprehensible in that the promise that two labor men would be appointed to high positions in the War Production Board has not been kept. Indeed, it seems that the War Production Board is more interested in pushing labor away than it is in getting the cooperation of labor."

Conference of the Methodist church in Atlanta, it was learned here today.

Germans Give Way To Tears, Nervous Chatter Upon Capture

By EDWARD KENNEDY. WITH THE BRITISH FORCES IN SIDI BARRANI, Egypt, Nov. 10.—(Delayed.)—(AP)—The last pockets of Axis resistance in this western Egyptian area were wiped out today and the main British armored force moved up to the Halfaya (Hellfire) Pass section on the Libyan border.

What remains of the once powerful Africa corps is believed to have taken refuge in the rugged Halfaya sector, which has been the scene of much fighting in the North African conflict.

Italians Surrender. The question at the moment is whether the Germans will retreat westward while the way still is open or will fight it out in their present position—which would mean in all probability their being destroyed there, for they are overwhelmingly outpowered.

Virtually all the many thousands of Italians left behind by the retreating Germans have surrendered without much fight. Some of the Germans in the pockets have fought it out to the end, as ordered, but many more have given up like the Italians rather than engage in suicidal combats with strong American-made tanks manned by veteran British crews.

The picked men of the German Africa corps remain brave and defiant as long as they are fighting but wilt once they surrender.

Tears and Chatter. Some give way to tears and others chatter nervously about the terrific bombings they have taken for weeks. Most of them seem devout, some wearing crosses about their necks and others carrying Bibles. No matter what a governmental regime may take toward religion, the hardships and dangers of war seem to make men turn toward it.

News of American successes in French North Africa has electrified British and Dominion troops already elated by their own victory.

Even during battles, soldiers on seeing an American ask the latest news from Algeria. Developments there give greater meaning to the long, hard fight of the past two years in this desert.

One jubilant Tommy said: "Retreat Disorderly. 'Hello, Yank. How are your boys doing in Algeria? It's now only a question of time whether you or we get to Tripoli first.'"

German prisoners had been told that the United States was a negligible factor as it was split internally and could not get going until too late.

The Germans knew nothing of the Algerian events and on seeing letters "U. S." on American correspondents' uniforms they were startled. They thought we were part of an American Army fighting them here.

The Axis retreat from El Alamein to Matruh was disorderly, judging by the amount of material left behind. But from Matruh westward the enemy destroyed almost everything that could not be taken along.

Equipment Destroyed. One exception was equipment of a chemical laboratory attached to a hospital in Matruh which the Germans entrusted to the Italians for withdrawal. Tillas complete and modern equipment was loaded on a trailer which was abandoned intact on a coastal trail.

But it did not fall into British hands because the Bedouins regarded it as fair game. In quest for knives, pots and the other things they valued they dumped the trailer and within a few minutes they had destroyed some $50,000 worth of instruments and apparatus.

Mindful of mines and booby traps, we proceeded carefully along this coastal trail before any British army unit had gone over it. Everywhere were signs that the enemy had withdrawn only a few hours earlier, destroying all they had to abandon.

Trail of Kits Found. We saw a trail of kits and their contents where some Italians had broken from a column and made for the main road, apparently to give themselves up.

We never caught up with them but we learned a lot about them, even their names, ranks and regiments, from what they left behind. There were letters from home and army documents. They were Blackshirts and these party documents were among the things discarded. For them, Fascism ended on a lonely desert trail as they decided to give up the fight.

The Bedouins extended the usual greetings they reserve for conquerors. They wanted us to understand they loved the "Inglees" and had always hated the Germans and Italians. As to the contents of their bulging sacks, they were not looting but merely picking up odds and ends that no one wanted.

"Mussolini Horse." Doubtless they had told the Germans the same sort of story they told us. Well, what would you do if you were a Bedouin trying to live a peaceful life with your flocks while great armies were battling back and forth across your desert home?

We saw a skinny white horse that obviously had seen better days. He had been abandoned in the desert and was trying to live on camel thorn and tough grass surrounding a brackish well. We wondered if this could be the horse Mussolini had sent to Africa so he could ride into Alexandria at the head of his victorious army. Probably not, but you never can tell.

Nazi Radios at Leipzig And Munich Go Off Air

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(AP)—German radio stations at Leipzig, Munich and Stuttgart went off the air tonight, indicating possible air activity over Germany.

Every local telephone call you make is handled through the same telephone switchboards and lines that handle urgent war calls. This equipment has a definite capacity. It can take care of only so many calls at a time. If more are made, some must wait. We can no longer expand our facilities because materials are more urgently needed to equip our fighters.

Crowding telephone lines and switchboards with unnecessary calls may delay vital war calls—calls that must not wait. So we urge that you please use your telephone less so that war industries, the armed forces and other war agencies can use theirs more. Make at least one-third fewer calls, and please be brief in all your telephone conversations. Ask members of your family and servants to do likewise.

The prompt handling of war calls is of vital importance to all of us. With your help we can furnish better communication facilities for the business of winning the war.

Two Fulton Youths Held In Car Thefts At Age of 21

Police Report Written Confessions and Recovery of 40 Tires.

Written confessions by two Fulton county youths early this week broke up a state-wide car stealing and stripping wave and resulted in the recovery of 40 automobile tires. Patrolman P. T. Kohler, of the East Point city police, said last night.

"Collection facilities are being turned in many places," the OPA announced, declaring the increased tempo of turn-ins indicated a "substantial stockpile" of rubber was being built to keep passenger cars on the road for essential driving.

Lower State Taxes Are Seen By Ellis Arnall

Governor-Elect Is Principal Speaker at Moultrie Exercises.

—MOULTRIE, Ga., Nov. 11.—(AP) Lower state taxes were promised by Governor-elect Ellis Arnall today to permit Georgians to pay war-boostered federal taxes and to buy more war bonds.

Pledging that Georgia's war effort would be "all-out" during his administration, Arnall was the principal speaker at an Armistice Day celebration here.

He asked Georgians "not to expect any more road building except for military purposes" until the war is over and said that "if necessary we'll lock the state capitol" to have sufficient funds to meet war obligations.

The state's second most important obligation, the Attorney General declared, "is to our boys and girls." He said "we must give them all the education possible. After this war, we're going to have to rebuild the world and we will need intelligent, educated persons with keen foresight. The boys and girls now in our schools must attend to that job."

He added that the sons of "men who started this job in 1917-18 are now being called on to complete the job, and with God's grace and assistance let's finish it once and for all."

Also a speaker was Lieutenant Colonel George H. McCaffrey, Spence Field Quartermaster, who declared this Armistice Day "has taken on new significance," describing it as "one of memorial for the men who gave their lives and efforts in World War I and a dedication to the men now serving in our armed forces."

The speaking was preceded by a long street parade which included no rubber-tired or gasoline-consuming vehicles to emphasize conservation.

1,000 Are Arrested In Lisbon, Nazis Say

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(P)—A broadcast by the German-controlled Paris radio said today that 1,000 arrests had been made in Lisbon in suppression of what the announcer called a "Communist revolt" in the Portuguese capital. "Communists were trained to subvert military discipline to prepare a situation which would be favorable in the advent of British and American invasion," he said. The Germans use the label

"Communist" to describe any European elements opposed to Naziism.

NAZI FORTIFICATIONS.

MOSCOW, Nov. 11.—(P)—The Russian news agency Tass, in a dispatch from Bern today, quoted German sources as saying that several detachments of the famous Nazi TODT organization had been sent to the Brenner pass on the Italian border to build fortifications. Other sections of the frontier also are being fortified, the dispatch said.

German Model Is Entered in Plane Contest

Only Foreign Type Submitted; Others Are American Designs.

A model plane, designed along the lines of the famous German Messerschmitt fighter, was entered yesterday in Loew's Grand theater's model plane contest. Manager Eddie Pentecost announced.

This is the only foreign type plane entered, Pentecost said. All types of American planes—Aircobras, gliders, and bomber planes—were copied by the air-minded youths who entered their models in the contest.

Cubans in Georgia Must Register

Cuban youth attending school in Atlanta and vicinity must register for the Cuban draft before Sunday, it was revealed yesterday.

Renan Moreira, a senior in industrial engineering at Georgia Tech, has been appointed by the Cuban secretary of state and the Cuban consul at Savannah, to conduct the registration. Students 18 years of age and older must report to his room, 301 Techwood dormitory, to register.

The Cuban questionnaire, almost identical to the American form, calls for the name, ages, the birthplace, names of parents, whether natives or foreign citizens, obvious physical defects, and the extent of education.

Moreira estimated around 50 to 60 Cuban students are enrolled at Tech, the University of Georgia, Emory and Georgia Military Academy.

L. E. Walters' Important Job Is Directing Salvage Program

Gave Up Sales Work for Biggest Selling Task, He Says.

(Editor's Note: This is one of a series of articles dealing with the men in Atlanta whose unusual wartime jobs affect the great American public.)

By BETTY MATHIS.
Direction of the efforts of men, women and even children in the war effort is the task assigned to L. E. Walters, the War Production Board's regional conservation manager, who abandoned his civilian pursuits as a glorified salesman (sales promotion executive was the title) to get into the biggest selling job of all time.

"Essentially, that is what my job is—selling," the former American boy said yesterday in describing his activities in directing the salvage program for seven southeastern states.

"The conservation division has had to organize 132,000,000 people to do a job they have never done before, and to do that work without getting paid for it. It's a pretty big task. That's why we have to be salesmen—super salesmen," Walters explained.

"We have done pretty well at it," he pointed out. "There is an active salvage committee in every county in the Atlanta region. Members of these committees are giving from 25 per cent to 100 per cent of their time to the salvage drive, voluntarily. It took selling to accomplish that."

"Before I went into government service, I thought that Americans were pretty complacent about the war. Now I know they are not complacent. They have been misinformed. But once we tell them a thing has to be done, and why it has to be done, you can bet they will do it. They will gripe their heads off—that's one of the things we are fighting for, the right to gripe—but they will do it and enjoy doing it while they gripe."

Equally as important as selling the conservation program to the public, is the function of expediting the flow of salvaged materials into war plants. Working to see that the junk dealer gets tires, gasoline and other priority materials to speed the flow of scrap to the mills is a part of the job. Encouragement through the award of merit posters to scrap dealers to ever increase this flow is another.

Called "Expeditors," "Expeditors, we might be called," the said, in discussing this phase of his work.

Pointing to the importance of women in the salvage effort, he declared that the waste products of the kitchen, grease and tin cans, among the most important commodities to the prosecution of the war. "Glycerin, made from waste grease, not only is used in making explosives, but is used in practically all delicate mechanisms of our machines of war. It is in a compass, in the recoil mechanism of our big guns, in the firing devices for depth charges. Tin is vital to furnish that hardness of metals in airplane engines which gives them wearing qualities. And the women alone are responsible for getting these materials into the war effort."

Walters is no "Gloomy-Gus" about this war, and particularly about the part he is playing in it. "The conservation program is doing three things: it is getting the material to win the war. It is teaching the most wasteful nation in the world the meaning of thrift. And as a result of the collection of rubbish, it is making us a more beautiful country to enjoy after the war is won."

Big Business.
This executive believes in running his office like a big business, and he keeps a close scrutiny on things to see that things are done in the most efficient manner possible.

SALESMAN—His biggest job is selling the public on the salvage drive, L. E. Walters, WPB's regional conservation manager, says.

It's a not-to-be-violated rule that all lights in his offices are turned out when not in use. Every one in the organization is self-disciplined to waste nothing.

There is another thing Walters insists on in his office, and that is that he and his employees at all times be available to serve the public. And his is one office where the secretary never asks a telephone caller "Who is calling, please."

Following his graduation from high school at Americus, Walters studied at the University of Detroit and Wayne University. For the past 15 years he has been connected with the sales, sales promotion and advertising departments of the Nash-Kelvinator Corporation, with headquarters in Detroit. He went with the general salvage section of WPB in Washington last March and came here as regional manager July 1.

2 New Films; Three Remain At Theaters

'Tales of Manhattan,' 'Aircraft Is Missing' Begin First Runs.

Two exceptional movies are on the menu for Atlanta theater patrons this week with the Fox theater's "Tales of Manhattan," occupying top billing. This picture opens tomorrow. "One of Our Aircraft Is Missing," a British film, is offered at Loew's Grand beginning today.

Three hold-overs are offered at the Rialto, Capitol and Rhodes theaters.

Fox

Something new in the way of a movie will be offered at the Fox theater beginning tomorrow where "Tales of Manhattan," 20th Century Fox's production, makes its bow. More than a dozen of Hollywood's greatest stars are counted among the list of leading players.

In what may result as the screen's most ambitious production, Fox tells in five sequences, the story of how a tailor, worn by the rich and the poor, the famous and the unknown, brings good luck to some and ill fate to others.

Charles Boyer and Rita Hayworth are the stars in the beginning, but as the story unravels, Henry Fonda and Ginger Rogers, Edward G. Robinson and George Sanders, Paul Robeson and "Rochester" are seen as star performers. The picture is in five parts and should be seen from the beginning.

Loew's Grand

"One of Our Aircraft Is Missing," an English movie with a British cast, produced by Alexander Korda, is scheduled to open at Loew's Grand theater today.

The story tells how a British bomber crew is forced down on Dutch soil and how these brave Englishmen fight their way back to freedom in their homeland. Based on authentic Dutch secret information, the story tells of how the anti-Nazi in Holland daily aid hundreds of Englishmen and Dutch people to escape across the channel to England.

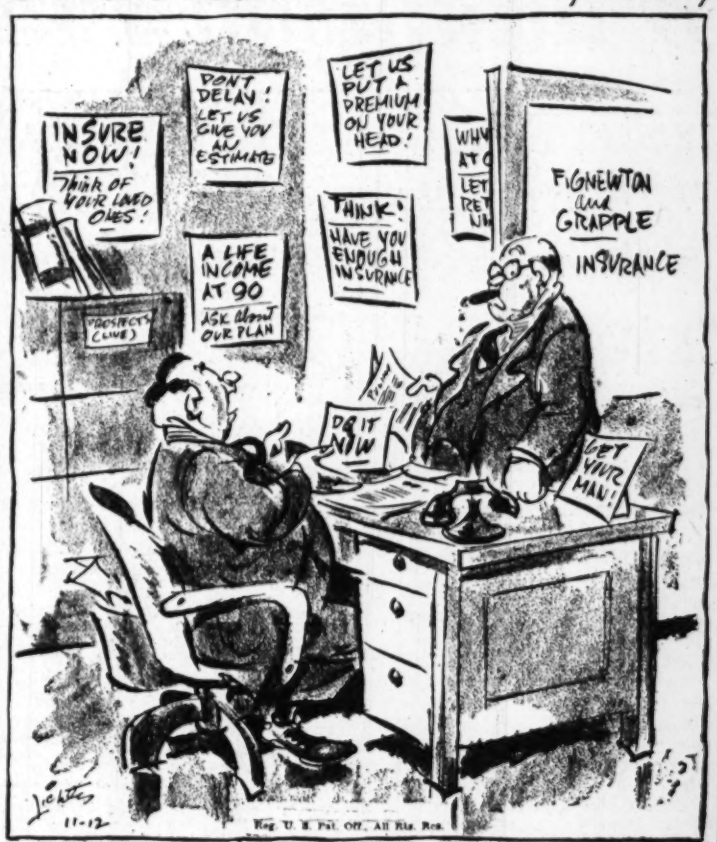

The main characters are portrayed by Eric Portman, Hugh Williams, Godfrey Tearle and George Withers.

Capitol

"Springtime in the Rockies," the tuneless musical which stars John Payne, Betty Grable, Cesar Romero and Carmen Miranda will continue for a third week in Atlanta. It set new attendance records at the Fox and is now playing a second week at the Capitol.

ords at the Fox and is now playing a second week at the Capitol. Filmed in technicolor, the picture is set near Lake Louise. Beautiful scenery, lots of hit tunes and plenty of comedy are combined in this show.

Rialto

"Pride of the Yankees" will play a sixth week at the Rialto theater. A last-minute rush in attendance encouraged Manager Bill Murray to hold this great movie

KEARNY, N. J., Nov. 11.—(AP)—Within 28 minutes this Armistice Day four new U. S. destroyers slid down the ways of the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company yards today in the swiftest quadruple launching of records. Six months ago the Federal Yards sent four destroyers into

All in the Game

By JACK TROY

Bedside Report It has been many a year since Georgia Tech has gone into the week of the Alabama game without the Old Man (W. A. Alexander) moving about the field, slamming his cap to the ground, bellowing instructions to a tackle or end and sending onlookers scurrying away from the sidelines.

("I don't care if you get hurt, but I don't want one of these boys running over you and hurting himself.")

Close followers of the Jackets—those hardy perennials who follow almost every practice—looked on it as a tradition. They miss the preliminary excitement. The Old Man had given his heart and soul to these preparations over a long span of years.

Takes His Medicine He was propped up on a couple of pillows, grinning, when Miss Rebecca ushered us into the room. Mrs. Alexander offered us her seat by the bed.

"Oh, no; please don't get up."

"Oh, yes, by all means," Mrs. Alexander responded. "He's well enough to do it himself, but this will give me a chance to catch up on some of Alex's correspondence for him. Be seated."

The Old Man is a fine patient, it was pointed out. He takes his medicine and doesn't complain about a diet. He has trimmed off 10 pounds. But he won't write any letters.

"The doctor told me to rest for two weeks. And I'm going to do what the doctor said," Alex emphasized.

We didn't talk much about the Tech-Alabama game. Alex said he'd like to see it.

"I'd just like to be there and watch the game. I wouldn't do any coaching. Dodd will do a good job."

The Old Man's hoping he may be present as a spectator. He's doing very well and by Saturday he will have been confined for almost two weeks.

Frnka Coaches Tulsa We were talking about the fact that all the big networks will be represented at Grant field Saturday. Harry Wismer, ace of the Blue network, had the Georgia-Alabama game alone. After it was announced he would be back to handle the Georgia Tech-Alabama game, the other networks disclosed they would have men here, too. A sort of follow-the-leader thing.

"Some of them may be passing up a bet in not broadcasting the Notre Dame-Michigan game," Alex pointed out. "That's a blood game."

Alex disclosed how relations had been broken off many years ago when Notre Dame, then a rather small Catholic school, upset Michigan. Yost charged the Irish with using ringers, and all that sort of thing.

The series is being resumed Saturday, and only because Yost is no longer at Michigan.

We commented on Boston College playing a poor schedule, and Alex brought up a point about unbeaten Tulsa.

"Do you know who's coaching out there?" he asked. "Frnka—Henry Frnka—the fellow who assisted Morrison at Vanderbilt. He is doing a great job and from what I hear Tulsa is plenty good. That's rich country, too. Some bowl would do well to give 'em some consideration."

Getting the Breaks Anybody who wants to know about Boston College need go no farther for the information than Coach Frank Howard, of Clemson.

Among other things, of course, Boston College plays all its games at home, which is Fenway Park, home of the Boston Red Sox.

Clemson lost to Boston College, 14 to 7. The manner of losing was this: B. C. intercepted a pass and made an 85-yard touchdown run. A Clemson back fumbled on his own five-yard line and the break gave B. C. the winning touchdown.

A Winner Nathan Leff reminds us that Clint Castleberry, Tech's star tailback, has never played on a losing team. He has never played in a losing game.

It is, of course, a remarkable record. Boys' High was never defeated while Clint was in the lineup and now Tech has won seven in a row.

Castleberry is more than a good-luck charm for Tech, however. He is, without a doubt, one of the nation's finest all-around backs. Even as a freshman he deserves to be given All-American consideration.

There is nothing except silly precedent that could stand in the way.

Kentucky Coach Noncommittal On Outcome of Tide-Tech Tilt

By ROMNEY WHEELER.
AP Sports Writer.

He won't say "yes," and he won't say "no." He won't even say "maybe."

In fact, Coach Ab Kirwan, of Kentucky—the one man who should know all about the relative strength of Georgia Tech, Alabama and Georgia—just wraps himself in large quantities of silence, letting others carry the ball of speculation.

Although his Kentucky Wildcats lost a bare 6-7 decision to Georgia, a 0-14 decision to Alabama, and took a 7-47 drubbing from Tech, Kirwan professes to know next-to-nothing about them.

"We played a much better game against Bama than we did against Tech," he explains.

"Consequently, it's hard to judge the relative merits of the two teams. Both lines are very strong, and the backs are great. I'd be unable to predict an outcome."

Williamson Picks Tech Against Tide Saturday

Jacket Fans Argue Merits Of '28 Eleven

Coaches, Alumni Disagree on Power of Present Team, '28 Champs

By DICK HAWKINS.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

Maybe it's the fact that Alabama's powerhouse is coming to town Saturday or maybe it's just plain cussedness but all the fans about town have warmed up an argument, to wit:

Is Georgia Tech's 1942 team better than the 1928 outfit that beat California in the Rose Bowl? To get the matter settled gently but firmly, four Atlanta coaches, whose combined span in coaching harness is something more than 90 years, were questioned, and what was the result?

You guessed it. Two were for the current edition and the other two were unalterably opposed.

Comparative scores are of little help to either side. In the first seven games this year, Tech has totaled 186 points and has allowed 32. The '28 team scored 171 points in the first seven encounters and gave up 34. The old-timers point out, however, that this year's schedule has been easier. The Rose Bowlers took on V. M. I., Tulane, Vanderbilt, North Carolina, Alabama, Auburn and Georgia in succession while the current squad has faced Auburn, Notre Dame, Chattanooga, Davidson, Navy, Duke and Kentucky. Any conclusion here might be in favor of the champs of the twenties.

Comparison of the two teams, man-for-man, is even more confusing. In Marce, Speer and Thrash, the '28 squad had three of the best tackles in the business and Peter Pund at center was a unanimous All-American. Westbrook and Deannon at guards needed no favors. Yost, did Jones and Dunlap at the flanks. In the backfield, Durrant, a smart field general, led Thomas, Mizell and Lumpkin on the first string.

The squad undoubtedly outweighed this year's starting combination at least five pounds per man but that very fact gives the razzle-dazzle proponents their best ammunition.

They contend that today's starting line with Marshall and Helms at ends, Anderson and Eaves at tackles, Jordan and Hardy in the guard spots and Manning at the pivot has stopped every running game this year, including that of Notre Dame.

And then they come to the creation of the '42 argument—Tech's all-star backfield roster, made up of 10 almost equal men. At least four of them pass and three are capable punters. Proponents claim they would bewilder the big powerhouse forwards of '28. They point to Prockey, Castleberry, Sheldon, Plaster, Stein, Dodd, McHugh, Faulkner, Eldredge and Luck with pardonable pride.

Here the old-timers wonder how the razzle-dazzlers would do if their backfield are full of opulent linemen. And there, of course, is the meat in the nut.

It's an argument that never can be settled but it'll be the No. 1 debate around these parts for some time to come.

Wildest Bout Of Year Seen Friday Night

Wrestling fans may need more than one pair of eyes to keep up with Friday night's headlines at the city auditorium.

With Ralph Garibaldi and Dorv Roche paired off against Cowboy Luttrell and Angelo Cistoldi in a team match, anything and everything is apt to happen. Team matches, offering at least twice the action and excitement of orthodox bouts, have been sweeping the country and Friday night's lineup is unusually promising in that it features four men who are old hands at this sort of warfare. From all indications, this match will furnish the wildest action of the entire season.

Another bout which will not put the customers to sleep is the semi-final featuring Ben (Tiny) Morgan, the massive Texan, against labe Zaharias, the Greek who bounces like a rubber ball when he hits the mat. And if Morgan tosses his opponents around, it would not be surprising to see Zaharias bounce up and hit the ceiling. Morgan plays awfully rough. Last week he used a series of back-breakers on the Golden Terror which put the masked giant out of action for several weeks.

The opening event will bring together Chief Chewacki, the romantic gypsy, and Jack Dillon, who has divided his time here between wrestling and acting as referee. Jack is as clumsy as they come but is a good showman, and this probably will be a humorous match, if not a clever one.

Lou Nova Will Battle Tami Mauriello Dec. 11

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Promoter Mike Jacobs today announced a 10-round heavyweight fight in Madison Square Garden on December 11 between Tami Mauriello, young Bronx belter, and Lou Nova, the Californian who fought Joe Louis a year ago.

The fight comes two weeks after the tussle between Jimmy Bivins, the Cleveland Negro who was to have been Mauriello's late fall opponent, and Lee Savold, the Des Moines veteran who was beaten by Tami a few weeks ago.

Sinkwich, Mobley, Governali May Set Marks

Frankie Needs 310 Yards in Two Contests

At Present Pace, Georgia Fireball Will Surpass Schwenk's Record.

By DAVE HOFF.
CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Each week of the waning football season convinces the American Football Statistical Bureau that it will be forced to draw a big blue pencil through its three prize-winning records when the college campaigns end.

Right now Hardin-Simmons' Rudolph (Little Doc) Mobley is a cinch to shatter the existing rushing figures. Frank Sinkwich, of Georgia, is virtually a sure bet to wipe out the former total-offense high, and Paul Governali, of Columbia, has a good chance to mark up a new passing record.

TOTTERING MARKS.
The statistical bureau pointed out these tottering marks today: Total offense (combined rushing and passing): The record is 1,928 yards by Bud Schwenk, of Washington University (St. Louis) in 1941. Sinkwich has 1,619 yards in eight games and has two to play—his final mark will be 1,549 yards.

Rushing: The record is 1,121 yards by Byron (Whizzer) White of Colorado in 1937. Mobley has traveled 1,033 yards in six games with three to play—that rate his final mark will be 1,549 yards.

Passing: The record is 1,457 yards set by Davey O'Brien of Texas Christian in 1938 and tied last year by Ed Schwenk. Governali has passed for 1,197 yards in seven games and has two to play—indicating a season's total of 1,539 yards.

If Governali fails to make the grade in total yards, he's likely to overthrow another record that appeared solid enough to stand many years. It's Davey O'Brien's 19 touchdown passes during 1938 for T. C. U., and Columbia's ace already has tossed 17 for scores. More unusual is that while O'Brien played on a winning powerhouse, Governali's team wins infrequently.

The passers really monopolized the spotlight in this week's figures. Turnbull Gillette, of Virginia, rose from tenth to fourth place by completing 23 out of 35 aeriels against Washington and Lee Saturday.

That shattered Northwestern Otto Graham's mark of 20 completions against Michigan and equalled the number of attempts made by Kansas' Ray Evans against T. C. U.

"SINKY" LEADS.
Catching up to the three offensive leaders has proved a futile job but the runners-up are compiling formidable yardage figures. Governali trails Sinkwich in total offense with 1,304 yards, 107 by rushing and 1,197 by passing. Bill Dutton, of Pittsburgh, is third with 1,120 yards; Roy McKay, of Texas, fourth, with 1,066 yards, and Evans, of Kansas, fifth with 1,055 yards.

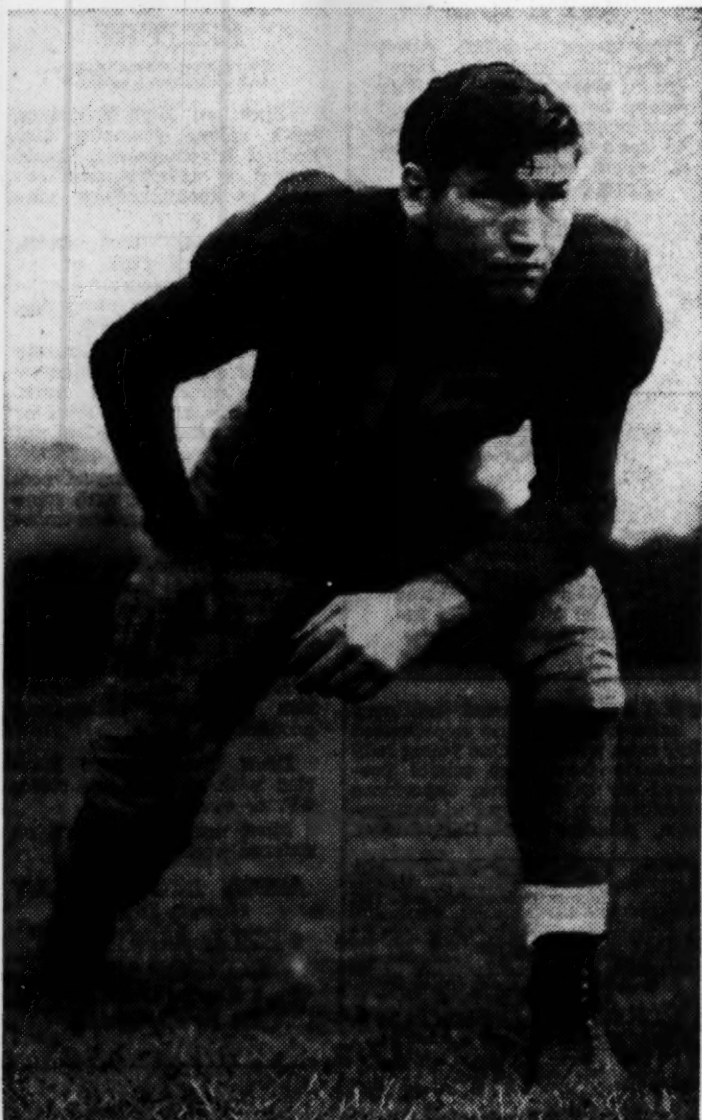

In passing, ranked on completions, Evans is in front with 75, good for 869 yards. Governali has thrown 73 for the leading total of 1,197 yards. Sinkwich has hit 61 for 1,068 yards, Gillette of Virginia 58 for 695 yards and Graham of Northwestern 56 for 743 yards.

Bobby Cifers, of Tennessee, remained as the leading punter with a 44.96-yard average for 28 kicks. Second is Joe Colone, Penn State freshman, with a 43.8-yard average for 25 punts.

Cullen Rogers, of Texas A. & M., continued to set the pace in pass catching with 27 good for 340 yards. John Ferguson, of California, pulled down 23 aeriels for 296 yards.

PROMOTED BY 'BAMA—Senior End Babs Roberts was moved up to the first team Tuesday as Coach Frank Thomas announced several changes to add punch to his already potent Alabama line for the contest with Tech here Saturday. Roberts, along with Johnny August, was outstanding against South Carolina last Saturday, and Thomas plans to start both against the Jackets. Roberts, who scales 180 pounds, is alternate captain of the Crimson eleven.

Jacket Line Must Play 'Iron Man' Role Saturday

Confident Engineers End Rough Work for Tide Game With Ragged Performance.

By JOHN BRADBERRY.
Georgia Tech ended rough work yesterday for its all-important game with Alabama here Saturday with a rough scrimmage with emphasis on defense.

With interest in the contest climbing to new heights every hour, the Yellow Jackets went calmly about their chores under the direction of Bobby Dodd and before the largest crowd of students and alumni to watch a practice this season.

The Tech team is deadily confident of maintaining its undefeated record, although it realizes that the Crimson Tide will offer the year's sternest test. The Yellow Jackets are an odd team. They display no outward emotion before a big game but there is no sign of overconfidence. One would think they were preparing to play West Mexico Teachers instead of the Crimson Tide in a game which will hold the attention of the nation's gridiron followers.

PLAY POORLY.
But they didn't look so good in the scrimmage. The reserves did most of the work and results were far from pleasing to Dodd. Hard-running Red Devil backs time and again ripped through for big gains and completed several passes. In fact, the Reds scored several times after getting the ball on the twenty-yard line.

Tackling was not up to standard and the boys are likely to get a good dose on the tackling and blocking dummies in today's workout. Pass defense, signal drills and punting will also come in for attention.

The Yellow Jackets' first-string line will be called on to perform its greatest job against 'Bama's mighty firewall. Harvey Hardy, Jack Jordan, Mutt Manning, Tom Anderson, Jack Marshall and Red Evans all will be called on to play nearly 60 minutes.

So far this season Tech has been able to use reserves freely in nearly all games, but the Alabama line is the toughest the Techs will run across. And it will take the best they have to cope.

DANGEROUS BACKS.
In addition, it takes plenty hard tackling to stop a fellow named Russ Craft when he's running with the ball—not to mention Johnny August, Russ Mosley, Don Salls and Bobby Tom Jenkins, other Tide threats.

The Tech backfield won't be tested as severely as the line as there are plenty of backs around to help a brother in distress. Pat McHugh will start at wingback with Davey Eldridge, who played his best game last week, Jim Luck and Jack Hancock in reserve.

Purples Given Underdog Role For Next Game

Premature Prognosticators Count Boys' High Out of Title Picture.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.
Long ago 'twas said when a man bites a dog it's news. It is quite likely several men have put molar into a canine flesh since a Boys' High football team went into a game in the role of underdog, so doubtless it is news that the Purples, who only last week dropped their first grid engagement in the last 31 played, will be the underpuppies when they clash with Benedictine College's powerful eleven Saturday afternoon in Savannah.

The charges of Shorty Doyal will have more than a full afternoon on their hands in the coastal town where the Cadets are making a serious bid to take the G. I. A. A. crown which for the past three years has rested in the Boys' High trophy cabinet. They are unbeaten in the league, and only last week showed their class by trouncing favored Richmond Academy team, which was previously undefeated in the organization, by a 35 to 19 count.

HARD LUCK.
When it rains it pours, and the Purples are really having their troubles these days after many years of nothing but plush. Lafayette Stainton, one of the best blocking guards the Doyalmen ever had, and Tom Thumb Freeman, a truly devastating blocking back who also is adept at hauling back punts for yardage, both are on the sidelines with injuries which may keep them out the rest of the year. They were the key blockers on nearly every offensive play the Purples used, and with their exit the vaunted Purple power.

So great is the need for a guard who can block, Chub (Gargantua) Jenkins, all 235 pounds of him, has been shifted from tackle to guard. In addition to Freeman the Hurricane has lost "Mayor" LeCraw and Ray Echols, his two understudies who are out with the flu, and Ralph Ewing has taken over the all-important quarterback job for the Benedictine game.

VALUABLE MEN.
Just to show how valuable Stainton and Freeman were to the Purple attack, which had scored almost at will until they were struck down, Boys' High lost to Columbus, 7 to 0. Previously Columbus had not scored on three G. I. A. A. opponents, having lost to Lanier, 9-0—The Purples beat Lanier 26 to 0—to Savannah 12-0, and to Richmond.

Take a glance at the G. I. A. A. standings below to see how ridiculous was Miami High's invitation to Columbus to play them for the "Southern Championship." Also wonder with any thinking man how some state writers are already counting Boys' High out of the G. I. A. A. title picture when they have won seven and lost one in the league, and "handing" it to Savannah, Rome or Benedictine, who have won three, two and two league games, respectively. You're a little premature, gentlemen; a LITTLE premature.

Chamberlin Tops Metro Golf Meet

Mrs. D. C. Chamberlin, with a net 75, carried off top honors in the weekly Women's Metropolitan Golf Association play yesterday at Forrest Hills Golf Club.

Second place in the first division play went to Mrs. L. H. Beck, who carded a net 80. In the second division, Mrs. E. B. Cary registered an 81 to win first place, while Mrs. W. S. Eakin grabbed second position with an 84 net.

Mrs. Chamberlin and Mrs. J. O. Rhyme turned in gross scores of 95.

Sinkwich, Nunnally To See Double Duty

Backfield Aces To See Service at Two Positions Against Chattanooga on Saturday.

By F. M. WILLIAMS.
ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 11.—Captain Frank Sinkwich and Jerry Nunnally are going to see service at two positions against Chattanooga Saturday, Coach Wallace Butts announced today.

Sinkwich, Coach Butts said, will be used at both tailback and fullback, and Nunnally, who has been running at wingback, will move up to the blocking-back position for part of the game.

It is possible Butts will start Sinkwich at fullback and Charley Trippi at tailback, in which case it will be the first time this season such a backfield combination started a game.

Injuries to Dick McPhee, Jim Todd and Red Keuper caused the Bulldog mentor to decide upon the shift of Sinkwich and Nunnally.

FULLBACK DEARTH.
Todd and McPhee are the only two fullbacks with any college experience on the squad. The only other man listed at this position is Freshman Sonny Lloyd, who will see plenty of service but who can't possibly handle the chores alone.

Keuper suffered a knee injury that may keep him out the rest of the season. The only other blocking backs are Walter Maguire and Joe Polak. Maguire has been bothered all year with a bruised hip and Polak has a leg injury.

Injuries to the three backs brought home to fans that Coach Butts has not been bluffing when he said he had a small squad.

"We have been very lucky so far, which is the reason we have been getting by each Saturday," the Bulldog boss said.

LUCK NEEDED.
"From here on out we will be just as good as our luck because we are operating on thin ice. Any more injuries, especially in the backfield, will spell our doom."

A light workout was held today and another is scheduled for tomorrow before the Bulldogs depart for Chattanooga.

Coach Butts said he would not even carry McPhee and Keuper on the trip, and he has little hopes of Todd getting into the tilt.

'Bugs' Baer Says:

Joe Downing, of Mt. Vernon, hands me the Oscar for throwing three strikes with the crystal ball in the Rochester Sunday American on June 4, 1933:

"We have asked for a 99-year lease with an option but tempers are shorter than busted shoe laces in the Old World."

"All we can get is peace for the next ten years. That's great for our eight-year-old schoolboys."

"It guarantees them plenty of action 10 years from now in 1943. And from then until 1947 everything will be tangled up like two tomatos over a washline."

It will soon be 1943, the schoolboys are 18 and I've muscled in on Nostradamus.

BROOKLYN, Nov. 11.—(P)—last night in the feature bout at the Broadway arena. Rossano weighed 150 1-2 and Gomez 159.

CAMP GRANT, Ill., Nov. 11.—(P)—Great Lakes showed too much power for the Camp Grant soldiers in an Armistice Day football feature today and ran off with a 33-to-0 victory, the sailors' third in a row.

Bruce Smith's 65-yard run set up the first Great Lakes touchdown, which Smith ultimately scored from the two-yard line.

Three more scores came in the second period. Johnny Popov went 21 yards for one, Ed Heffernan raced 35 yards for another and Steve Belichick scored from the one-yard line after a 50-yard pass interception by Basil Petry. The final touchdown came in the fourth quarter when Ed Norris drove 15 yards through center.

Camp Grant's greatest scoring bid came early in the first period when Stan Stasica, of South Carolina, and Reino Nori led a 61-yard march that was stopped on the sailors' 13-yard line.

Coach Butts said he would not even carry McPhee and Keuper on the trip, and he has little hopes of Todd getting into the tilt.

Four Nazi Pilots Fail To Shoot Down Doolittle's Fortress

By WES GALLAGHER.

ALLIED FORCE HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Because a Flying Fortress proved more than a match for four German pilots who did not know what big game they were stalking, Brigadier General James H. Doolittle, chief of the Twelfth Air Force, is continuing to direct the U. S. air attack against the Axis instead of lying dead.

Second Front Critics Told To Shut Up Now

U. S. Invasion of Africa Seen as Decisive Factor of War.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(AP)—News of the capitulation of all French North Africa to American Expeditionary Forces was greeted with expressions of satisfaction at the capitol today.

Senator Hill, Democrat, Alabama, a member of the senate military committee, said "this should silence some of the critics who have been carping about a second front."

Senator George, Democrat, Georgia, described the drive as "a most important move against Germany" and her allies, but counseled against "undue exultation" at this time.

"We may meet some very stubborn fighting in Tunisia if Rome is able to effect a junction with fresh Axis troops there," he said. "In any event, it is certain that Hitler will make a strong stand in southern Europe—France, Italy, and possibly Spain."

Senator Taft, Republican, Ohio, said the latest African dispatches reinforced his conviction that the power of the United States would prove decisive in the war.

"Every American must be proud of the tremendously effective way the invasion of French North Africa was organized and executed by the Army and Navy," Taft said.

Senator Truman, Democrat, Missouri, said he hoped the good news kept coming in. "I also hope," he said, "that the French come to life and bust the Italians in the nose down in southern France. I don't think Italy has her heart in this war."

Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, saw the capitulation as largely removing the effectiveness of Dakar, French West Africa, as an Axis base.

"They can't get to it now," he said.

Other comment included: Senator Norris, Independent, Nebraska: "I'm delighted to hear it."

Senator Bone, Democrat, Washington: "It is heartening to realize the French leaders have finally awakened to the desirability of co-operating with the United States. It is obvious that our interests are their interests and the capitulation of French North Africa does not so much mean that our troops have conquered, as I see it, as that the French in that area are going to become our Allies. It will be a happy day for all of us when the Allies, being victorious, can turn back to a free France all of its possessions."

Navy Dismisses Aroff; Was Courtmartialled

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Lieutenant Marvin McCarthy, Naval press relations officer, said tonight that Maurice N. Aroff, who held the rank of lieutenant commander in the Navy, has been dismissed from the service. He was tried by a courtmartial at San Francisco last summer on charges of misconduct and falsehood.

One of seven charges on which the six-man Naval courtmartial tried Aroff was that he had accepted a $950 automobile from Tony Martin, the singer, to facilitate Martin's enlistment in the Navy.

Doolittle and 12 staff officers were attacked by four enemy planes. The co-pilot was wounded in a running gun battle and Doolittle took his place in the fighting ship.

This is the story of how the short-handed young Fortress crew led by Pilot Lieutenant John C. Summers, of Lexington, Tenn., saved Doolittle and his staff officers, some of whom did not know they had been in a fight until the co-pilot fell to the floor covered with blood from a machinegun bullet in his shoulder. Among the officers on the Fortress was Lieutenant Colonel Joe Phillips, of New York.

(A United Press correspondent, operating under a military pool arrangement which made his reports available to other services, said Phillips, originally from Kentucky, formerly with the New York Herald-Tribune and then was managing editor of Newsweek.)

The Fortress flew a few feet above water most of the time and it was short-handed because of the large number of officers aboard.

When the four enemy planes were sighted the crew jumped to their posts. Most of the staff officers in the bomb bay were unaware of the approach of the planes.

Enemy Gives Chase. The pilot turned and the enemy gave chase.

Just skimming the waves, the Fortress was not at its best operational height and in a few minutes the enemy took position above, ready to peel off on the speeding plane, whose guns now were spitting fire.

The lead German plane dove down and met a burst from the Fortress' top guns. It wobbled and staggered off, badly hit.

The staff officers inside had heard the guns but, except for Doolittle and Phillips, who had seen the planes, they said nothing. They said later they thought the crew was "practicing."

The second and third Nazi planes attacked almost simultaneously. Machinegun bullets smashed into the Fortress and the lieutenant co-pilot was hit in the shoulder. He fell to the floor.

One of the German planes was believed badly damaged. It appeared to be having difficulty gaining height.

Doolittle Takes Over. Officers heard the bump of the co-pilot's fall. Opening the door to the pilot's cabin, they saw him on the floor, pulled him out while General Doolittle, his floppy flyer's cap cocked tighter around his head, climbed in and took the co-pilot's place.

The last German plane turned in, made a half-hearted attack, and turned away.

"If those Germans had known we had the commanding general of the 12th Air Force aboard they damn well would have stuck around or maybe the Fortress was just too much for them," one officer said.

Doolittle, with Summers, whose flying skill played a large part in the battle, the plane to its destination and the co-pilot was taken to a hospital.

In a few minutes after his arrival, the leader of the Tokyo raid was at his desk, directing operations of his planes in North Africa.

Atlantic Sinking Takes Lives of 34 Seamen

AN EAST COAST PORT, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Thirty-four of a 38-man crew drowned in the sinking of a small United Nations merchantman by an enemy submarine in mid-Atlantic last month, the Navy announced today.

Heavy seas overturned a lifeboat into which most of the crew had crowded following the torpedo explosion which occurred about midnight during a near gale.

Survivors, who managed to hold onto one of two lifeboats thrown overboard, were picked up seven hours after the encounter by an Allied vessel.

RECEIVING CODE—Sara Emanuel, of Arlington, Ga., another one of the young women learning radio work at the Chapman Springs project, glances up from receiving code messages. As fast as the code comes in, it is transcribed to paper through the typewriter.

Radio Work Is Much to Liking Of Blue-Eyed Jenny James

When the National Youth Administration talks about replacing men with women in war jobs, it means business.

Living proof of this is Miss Jenny James, assistant radio foreman (or forelady, take your choice) at the NYA's Chapman Springs project, near College Park. Miss James is training boys and girls to be operators for commercial airlines, the Army Signal Corps, the Air Transport Command, etc.

Blue-eyed, 22-year-old, vivacious Miss James has five years experience as a "ham" behind her—meaning she's been an amateur radio operator for that length of time. Born in Clarksville, Ga., she attended Murphy Junior High and Girls' High schools in Atlanta. She took up radio as a hobby, but couldn't get any formal "book learning" in this field.

Tech High was open only to boys, the NYA had not gotten into radio then, and besides lots of people didn't see much point in a woman doing that sort of work, anyway. So she just struck out on her own, putting around with equipment, reading books, building oscillators and transmitters, and talking with other "hams" all over the world.

The most interesting fellow ham she talked with via short-wave?

Crocodile Hunter. "Probably a crocodile hunter in South Africa," says Jenny, smiling at the recollection. "He said he caught them with his bare hands, and that any crocodile under four and a half feet long was too small to fool with. He tanned the hides and sold them to manufacturers of purses, luggage, shoes, and so forth. It was a little morbid to me."

Out of the people she talked to in South America, only one didn't speak English, Jenny found.

But all the varied experiences of the "good old days" don't hold a candle to the business of training boys and girls as radio operators, according to the enthusiastic Miss James. In the six months she has been at the NYA project, she's seen three of her girls go with Delta Air Lines here, two with the Civil Aeronautics Authority at Candler Field, and a large number of boys and girls with the Signal Corps at Fort McPherson.

U. S. Takes Offensive On East and West On Guadalcanal

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Destruction of 12 Japanese planes by aerial attacks in the north and south Pacific was announced by the Navy today in a communique which also reported that American troops on Guadalcanal island in the Solomons were conducting "offensive operations" on both their eastern and western flanks.

Damaging of two enemy cargo vessels by aerial bombardment also was announced.

There was no explanation of the meaning of "offensive operations," and it was not clear whether fighting had once more broken out between the main Japanese and American forces to the west of Guadalcanal airfield, or whether it was merely meant that an advance had been made with little or no opposition.

Ground Operations. On both flanks the ground operations were supported by United States Army planes. The action to the eastward of the American positions presumably was a continuation of the advance under way in that sector for several days, with the apparent purpose of bottling up Japanese forces recently landed there.

Seven of the 12 planes destroyed were float-type Zeros caught on Holtz Bay, Attu island, Monday (Washington time). The Japanese abandoned that Aleutian outpost in mid-September, and a naval spokesman said that the reconnaissance which disclosed the presence of the Zeros disclosed no other sign of enemy activity there. It was presumed, therefore, that the Japanese had made no attempt to recapture the island.

The two enemy cargo vessels were caught at Kiska, the foe's sole remaining Aleutian base, also on Monday. One of the Army planes which damaged them was itself damaged by enemy anti-aircraft fire, but managed to return to its base.

South Pacific. The Navy's report on the South Pacific increased the total of Japanese planes previously reported destroyed during an attack by American aircraft on an enemy cruiser-destroyer formation in the

Clarke To Push Scrap Campaign

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 11.—Friday the 13th is generally regarded as an unlucky day, and it will be an unlucky day indeed for Adolf Hitler & Company if plans now being perfected by Athenians are carried out.

For it will be on Friday the 13th that business and professional men, as well as children in the rural schools and the grown-ups on farms are going to pry into every nook and cranny and round up scrap material.

School children in the city schools have already collected 152,000 pounds.

J. Swanton Ivey, Clarke salvage chairman, has been informed by Max Michael, executive officer of the National Bank of Athens, that this institution will give $25 in cash prizes to speed the campaign.

"Herd up" that used stove, heater, fur coat, radio, gun, etc., and "corral" cash by advertising them in the Want Ads of The Constitution.
